Jackson State College Deaths

Bury 2nd Black Youth

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The second young black killed in a barrage of police gunfire at Jackson State College a week ago was buried Friday with tributes from some and promises of a full investigation by others.

"No amount of oratory here by me or anyone else will be able to replace the spirit of James Earl Green," said Brenda Rogers, student body president at Jim Hill High where the 17-year-old Green was a student.

"How long, oh Lord, will our white brothers continue to destroy us? It can't go on any longer. It must stop now," Negro civil rights leader Charles Evers said at the funeral service in the black Masonic temple near Jackson State.

"No stone will be left unturned," said Sen. Charles H.

Percy, R-Ill., who flew to Jackson with a 90-man delegation headed by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine. Percy said the guilty "will be prosecuted ... no matter who they are."

An overflow crowd, including eight senators and 10 congressmen, attended the funeral service. The 3,000 seats in the building were filled and others attending the funeral lined the walls of the big hall and overflowed onto the stairs.

A telegram from President Nixon was read at the funeral: "I want you to know Mrs. Nixon and I continue to share your sorrow," the President said. The telegram said the shooting "saddens the entire nation."

There was a brief graveside service and Green's mother, Mrs. Myrtle Burton, remained composed throughout.

Police were stationed near the temple and along the motorcade route, and Gov. John Bell Williams said earlier a contingent of highway patrolmen and 1,300 National Guardsmen were available if needed to head off trouble. But there were no incidents.

Williams appealed for calm in a Thursday night radio-television speech. He termed the deaths of Green and Phillip Gibbs, 21, of Ripley, a tragedy. Green was a high school senior and Gibbs a Jackson State student.

Gibbs was buried at Ripley Sunday in quiet family rites.

Firemen, responding to an alarm on the campus, were pelted with rocks and city and state officers were called.

They reported hearing shots from Alexander Hall, a women's dormitory two blocks away, and moved to that area. An officer, speaking through a bullhorn, sounded an appeal for order, but was interrupted by a sound of officers interpreted as a sniper shot.

A highway patrolman, hit by a missile, fell to the ground and a 25-second police barrage followed, leaving two dead and nine wounded.

Blacks March In Georgia

FORSYTH, Ga. (AP) — About 150 Negroes and a sprinkling of whites trudged northward toward Griffin Friday as they neared the end of a 120-mile protest march that began Tuesday in Perry.

After an overnight stop, the group is expected to board buses Saturday morning for the final 40-mile leg of the journey to Atlanta.

They will be joined in Atlanta by thousands of others for a rally at the tomb of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a march past the state capital and a mass rally at Morehouse College.

Four state patrol cars, with two patrolmen in each, joined the march just outside Forsyth to direct traffic and handle disorder if any should occur. So far, the march has been peaceful.

The procession numbered about 300 when it left Forsyth shortly after noon, but many were high school pupils who marched only a short distance.

About 100 pupils left class at the urging of marchers who went through halls of Hubbard High, an all-Negro school, asking the youngsters to join the group.

Monroe County School Supt. J. E. Mitchell, who is white, said it was a "regrettable situation...they did not walk out. They were led out."

Leaders stepped up the pace of the march Friday and said they would walk more than in the past two days.

Between the start of the march at Perry and Forsyth, 62 miles away, the marchers had walked only 26 miles, using motorized transportation the rest of the way.

Gov. Lester Maddox has said that state troopers and National Guardsmen will be available in Atlanta Saturday to protect the demonstrators and the public.

Maddox said Thursday he had intelligence reports that someone now in the march, or who will join later, plans to kill a Negro demonstrator or instigate violence of some sort. March leaders discounted the report.

The march is to protest "racial repression" and the deaths of 12 persons in Augusta, Ga., Jackson, Miss. and Kent State University in Ohio in recent weeks. Several caskets have been carried on a mule-drawn wagon during the march.

A number of civil rights and antiwar groups are to join the Saturday rally and speakers include Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., Georgia Rep. Julian Bond, Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro playwright LeRoi Jones and officials of the sponsoring Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

McCormack Argues Should Back Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker John W. McCormack, soon to end a congressional career that spanned eight presidencies, says Congress should make every effort to back a president, regardless of party, on defense and foreign affairs.

The veteran Massachusetts Democrat, in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, contended his party has a better record in this regard than the Republicans—and has benefited politically.

McCormack did not rule out the possibility that some compromise congressional position on the Southeast Asia war may yet be approved by the House, which so far has rejected any limitations on President Nixon's Indochina operations.

The 78-year-old speaker repeated his strong support for lowering the voting age and said he welcomes greater participation by young people—in fact, citizens of all ages—in politics.

Key questions and answers:

Q. Do you think there will be repeated efforts in Congress to go on record in opposition to the present policy in Southeast Asia?

A. I would expect there would be further attempts during this year, yes.

Q. But you think the House would probably continue to vote them down?

A. Well, it's according to what the Senate does. If the Senate adopts an amendment which does not take away from the President his constitutional duties and responsibilities as commander in chief, why that might present a different situation to the House...

I'm not prepared to answer that now until I see what happens. But I don't think it would be wise to completely tie a president's hands, no matter who the president is, in the field of foreign affairs and in connection with the national interest and the national defense of our country.

Q. You have had occasion to stick pretty well with that concept, haven't you?

A. I think that is very fundamental and it would be dangerous for our country to get away from it...

Q. We hear a lot about the natural antagonism, the natural tension between Congress and the executive. Have you ever found that to be a severe problem in dealing with eight presidents?

A. It might be a problem with me at times, but not a severe one, because I have always felt the separation of powers in our government...

I don't believe that because my party is in control and the chief executive is a member of the Republican party that we should be a party of blind opposition.

For many years the Republican party adopted that role when the presidents of the United States were Democrats and the people resented it, and properly so.

Ours is constitutional government, not parliamentary government like in England where the minority party is considered the loyal opposition. Under our constitution and political institutions there should be no such thing as a loyal opposition. The minority party should act affirmatively.

There might be sharp disagreements at times, but it

Arab Guerrillas Ambush Israelis

TEL AVIV (AP) — Arab guerrillas fired three bazooka shells into an Israeli school bus near the Lebanese border Friday, killing eight children and three adults and wounding 22. The children were aged five through eight.

Israel responded swiftly, shelling four Lebanese villages and moving warplanes into action along the border.

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, in a rare broadcast, expressed "shock and horror" at the school bus attack. She said Israel holds Lebanon responsible for guerrillas operating from Lebanese territory and warned that her government would use "all necessary means" to defend Israeli lives.

A small, ultraleftist Arab guerrilla group based in Amman, Jordan, claimed it made the attack on the school bus in revenge for an Israeli bombing raid that hit an Egyptian school April 8 and left 30 children dead. Israel insisted that attack had hit military installations.

Britain quickly denounced the bus ambush as "a cruel act of terrorism" and said it would raise the issue at the United Nations.

In New York City, intruders shouting "an eye for an eye" entered two offices of pro-Arab organizations and beat three men with clubs. The assailants were believed to be members of the militant Jewish Defense League.

Sources in Beirut reported increased Israeli troop movements near the southern Lebanese border, creating fear of another Israeli raid into Lebanon against guerrilla outposts.

The school bus was hit at close range by bazooka shells as it rounded a sharp curve on a road along the Lebanese border. The guerrillas ignored Israeli army vehicles and other cars, zeroing in on the green and yellow bus from a clump of bushes on Lebanese territory about 65 feet from the road.

Israel's retaliation shelling of four Lebanese villages killed 15 persons and wounded 30, a communique from Beirut said. It reported six women and two children were among those killed and that 83 houses were damaged. Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami held a security meeting at the presidential palace and it was decided not to call a meeting of the United Nations Security Council.

In a letter to the U.N. Security Council, Israel denounced the ambush of the bus and labeled it an "outrage."

Israel previously has warned that it would retaliate in full for guerrilla attacks launched from Lebanese soil.

At the scene of the ambush, an Israeli army officer stepped on a personnel mine apparently planted by the guerrillas and his foot was blown off.

Report Tentative Postal Agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative agreement on a proposed senate bill which would give President Nixon most of what he seeks on postal reorganization and increased stamp charges was announced Friday.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, said the plan would include authority for the administration to raise the letter stamp from 6 to 8 cents upon enactment.

However, the proposal must still be acted on by the full committee and the Senate in floor debate and then be worked over in a Senate-House conference. McGee agreed many changes could be made.

The agreement was worked out at a meeting of McGee, Sen. Hiram L. Fong, R-Hawaii, senior Republican on the panel, and Postmaster General Winton M. Blount. It includes these features:

—The authority for the 8-cent letter stamp. The administration, in order to boost first-class letter rates, would have to make the same 33 per cent hike also in second class (newspapers and magazines) and third class (chiefly advertising material).

—The additional 8 per cent pay hike for the 725,000 postal employees which Blount negotiated last month with the postal unions.

—Transfer of administration of the Post Office Department to an independent agency run by a nine-member board of governors named by the President.

The board would select a postmaster general who would no longer be in the cabinet.

—Creation of a five-member commission named by the President to fix postal rates.

—Authority for the new agency to work out wages in collective bargaining with the postal unions.

Nixon is particularly eager for authority to put into prompt effect the 8-cent letter rate.

This would supply by far the biggest part of the $1.5 billion of new revenue he seeks from postal rate increases to meet a deficit in the department expected to be $1.5 billion or more in fiscal 1971 which begins July 1.

In the Senate proposal, pay increase would take effect when the bill is signed into law. McGee's committee decided to meet Monday to start voting on the proposed legislation.

Agree On Cambodia Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate agreed Friday to a test vote next week on the drive to curb U.S. activities in Cambodia.

The vote will come at 2 p.m. Tuesday on language offered by sponsors of the Cooper-Church amendment in a bid to make it more palatable to the administration.

But it may give little indication as to the strength of the opposing forces because some opponents of the amendment said they would support the revision even though they don't feel it goes far enough.

Republican Leader Hugh Scott

contended the revised language would still tie President Nixon's hands.

Approval of the revised phrasing would still leave the way open for later moves by administration forces to loosen the proposed curb by authorizing the President to take action necessary to protect U.S. forces in Vietnam—the announced purpose of the current Cambodian operation.

"I think the current language causes considerable concern at the White House and I think they are warranted," Scott told reporters. He added that the revised version "improves" the Cooper-Church amendment but that "the search for language continues."

"It must be made clear," the Pennsylvania Republican said, "that the President as commander in chief has the right to protect armed forces in the field in the process of withdrawal." He told a questioner this should apply to both Cambodia and Vietnam.

The revised language to the preamble of the Cooper-Church amendment leaves intact its substantive provisions barring funds for "retaining" U.S. troops in Cambodia and restricting aid and air operations. It adds words making clear that the fund cutoff would take effect after July 1, 1970—the date set by Nixon or an end to U.S. operations in Cambodia—and adds a clause specifying the action is being taken "in concert with the declared objectives of the President of the United States in Cambodia after July 1, 1970."

Opponents of the amendment contend it could—if enacted swiftly—be used to pull troops out of Cambodia before June 30 and could be interpreted as a repudiation of the President. Sponsors insist they are upholding the President's announced aims.

South Viets Remain

Plan Cambodian Stay

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese military command said Friday that despite President Nixon's June 30 deadline for the withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Cambodia its forces will remain there "as long as necessary."

A spokesman recalled statements by President Nguyen Van Thieu and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky that government troops would stay to complete their mission, and had the ability to do so without U.S. support. The spokesman said the purpose is to destroy enemy units and bases and remove the threat to South Vietnam.

He did not elaborate on whether the mission of government troops would be extended to help the Cambodians in any battles against enemy forces.

However, in a speech last week to which the spokesman alluded, Ky vowed: "We will stay until they (the Cambodians) feel they have the strength to fight the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese by themselves. Only then will we go."

In Washington, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said in a television interview the South Vietnamese should be free to fight in Cambodia after the American deadline and to enter the Cambodian sanctuaries if the enemy tries to rebuild them. It would be unwise, he said, to fix any timetable for their withdrawal.

Ky had said the South Vietnamese decided they could leave about 16,000 troops in Cambodia in addition to the use of naval vessels and air force fighter-bombers.

Officials disclosed that South Vietnamese troop strength in Cambodia has grown to about 40,000 and marine and infantry elements have advanced as far as three miles from Phnom Penh, the capital. Last previous estimates had put about 30,000 Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

The elements driving from the south toward Phnom Penh were linking up with other government units moving in from the east to provide security for Highway 1. This is the major route from Saigon to Phnom Penh. The purpose, a spokesman said, is to guarantee the free movement of supplies to South Vietnamese forces.

Sources reported that additional commitments of U.S. troops to Cambodia in recent days have increased American strength across the frontier from 10,000 to about 12,000. More troops were needed, the sources said, to help remove the thousands of tons of war material and food captured from enemy base camps.

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, who returned to Saigon Thursday after talks in Washington with President Nixon, met for more than an hour Friday with President Thieu, presumably to discuss the Cambodian situation.

The allied commands claim their troops have killed more than 8,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in Cambodia. American losses stand at 172 killed and 687 wounded. About 600 South Vietnamese have been killed in the offensive and more than 2,000 wounded.

The U.S. Command said 9

South Vietnamese marines were killed and 15 wounded Thursday when American helicopter gunships fired on them by mistake about two miles inside Cambodia.

In a delayed report of another war accident, the command said a U.S. artillery unit killed an American paratrooper and wounded four Tuesday when it fired into their position about 20 miles west southwest of Hue. The accident is under investigation.

Generally light action was reported from Cambodian and South Vietnamese battlefields.

In Laos, a Defense Ministry spokesman said enemy forces were trying to occupy the entire eastern rim of the Bolovens Plateau in the southern part of the country.

He said the purpose was to secure Attapeu, which enemy forces seized recently, and to complete the control of the Xe Kong River. This would permit the North Vietnamese to transport supplies from the Ho Chi Minh trail by boat to northeastern Cambodia.

Editorial Comment

First Of The Wild Rivers

One of the most attractive variants of the wilderness-preservation concept is the idea that certain wild river areas should be kept inviolate. It is gratifying that the first of several such areas authorized by Congress has been dedicated. This is a stretch of the Rio Grande and Red rivers in New Mexico.

At the dedication ceremonies near the confluence of these streams, some interesting words were spoken by Boyd L. Rasmussen, director of the Bureau of Land Management. "We are here," he said, "not to commemorate what man has done so much as to commemorate what he has not done: he has not spoiled them (the rivers)." That is a thing worth thinking about in connection with the whole rationale of preserving as much as possible of our remaining natural heritage.

The same goes for this additional comment by Rasmussen, uttered on a headland where the Red flows into the Rio Grande: "These rivers have come down through history and have arrived here clean and wild, testifying eloquently to their past and present and—we hope—to the future."

This is the imperative that faces us: to keep beautiful stretches of river "clean and wild" so that they may be enjoyed not only by those now living but by future generations. That will be true along the Rio Grande where it meanders for 48 miles south from the Colorado border, and along the last four miles of the Red before it joins the Rio Grande. In time it will be true as well of numerous other river areas scattered about the nation. All in all, this is heartening evidence that our generation is determined to save some beauty for those Americans yet unborn.

A GLANCE Into The Past

10 YEARS AGO

The U.S. Census Bureau has notified Mayor Robert A. DuBois that Jacksonville has a population of 21,568. This is a gain of 1,181 in the past 10 years.

A new peak in the price of Morgan county farm land was attained Saturday when 122 acres near Waverly was sold at auction by the executors of the estate of the late Edward M. Narr for $75,608.

A junior tornado struck the Eldred community Friday afternoon. Trees, utility lines, automobiles and other property was damaged, but nobody was hurt.

20 YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Burbank celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday with a house party at their home on Webster avenue, which was attended by friends from Morgan county, Chicago, St. Louis and Winchester.

Eight trash cans will be set up around the Jacksonville public square by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Our elm trees are being denuded by a very heavy infestation of canker worms.

50 YEARS AGO

Kansas farmers say they are determined to hold their wheat crop for $3.13 per bushel. All we can say is that there's nothing the matter with Kansas at the present time.

The Peacock Inn on the south side of the square yesterday passed into new hands, with Messrs. Hood & Larson selling this popular establishment to Benjamin Green, Milton E. Stout and Harry Laudauer.

The Alton road will be double-tracked between Manchester and Roodhouse this summer.

75 YEARS AGO

Last week's frost did more damage than was at first thought. Gardeners are starting all over and many farmers are replanting corn. The grape crop is all ruined, along with considerable of the fruit.

Since the cold snap, trade has been quiet, but in general, prospects are good.

Our boys showed a lot of ginger yesterday, but luck was against them, and the St.

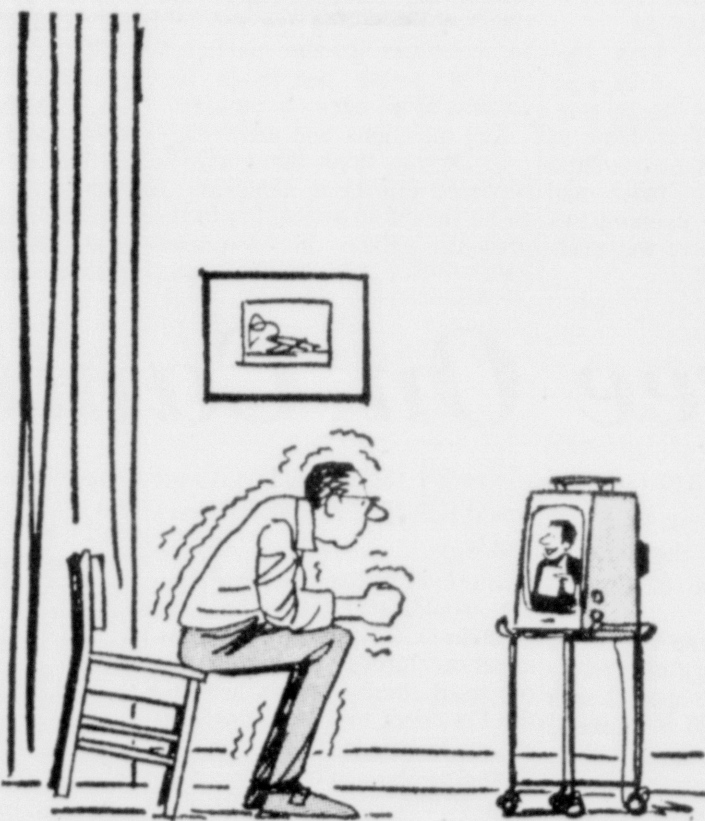

Joe Saints won 12-10. It was a hard game to lose, but we did it finally.

100 YEARS AGO

To-day the Masonic fraternity of this city goes to Carrollton to assist in the laying of the corner stone of the new school house in that place.

The large crowd of country folks in town yesterday were much entertained by the "King of Pain," with his banjo and "gas." He distributed his cure-all at a fearful rate—so, judging from his story and sales, too—the doctors will have no more business for a twelve-month.

To the Editor:

On Tuesday, May 12, at about 11:45 p.m., I was driving east on a gravel road west of Merritt. Rounding an S curve, I met an unidentified car on my side of the road and in order to avoid a head-on collision, swerved to the left, lost control of my car and turned it over. The accident put me in the hospital. The unidentified driver didn't stop to inquire about the condition of the driver of the wrecked car.

As a result I was ticketed for driving too fast for conditions; a wrecker was called resulting in towing charges; an ambulance was called resulting in an ambulance fee; I was admitted to the hospital in Jacksonville resulting in a large bill for X-rays, therapy and medical treatment; my car was wrecked and will have to be replaced; I lost four days work and maybe my job; and my family suffered mental anguish—all of this because I averted a head-on collision.

It seems to me that some of the people of this and surrounding counties should become more aware of their responsibilities.

It may have seemed easier not to stop at the accident scene, but your conscience must still be faced; and when you drive on this road again, you can thank God that you are alive. I do.

Statistically yours,

Dear Sir:
Humanitarians in Florida have asked citizens throughout the United States to help in the last-ditch fight against two bills which would permit so-called bloodless bullfighting and would exempt such contests, rodeos and trained animal acts from the Florida anti-cruelty laws. The bills, S.B. 1180 and H.B. 4756, passed both houses of the legislature with such speed that there was virtually no opportunity for reasoned opposition. The bills are now before the Governor. THOSE AGAINST THE ABOVE-MENTIONED BILLS SHOULD SEND A TELEGRAM OR AIR-MAIL LETTER TO: DAY TO: Governor Claude R. Kirk, Jr., Governor's Office, Tallahassee, Florida 32304. HE CAN VETO THESE BILLS.

If Florida accepts amendments to its anti-cruelty statutes for activities which our country has opposed throughout the entire history of its animal protective legislation, there is grave danger that other states will be faced with the same fight. COUNTRIES WHICH PROMOTE BULLFIGHTING ARE NOTORIOUSLY CRUEL AND CALLOUS IN THEIR TREATMENT OF ALL ANIMALS. THE PUBLIC IS "CONDITIONED" TO ACCEPT CRUELTY IN THE ARENA AND SO ACCEPTS IT IN THE STREET, THE HOME, THE SLAUGHTERHOUSE, THE LABORATORY, THE POUND, AND EVERY OTHER AREA.

Our country still has a long way to go in providing decent protection to animals, but it has come a long way, and humanitarians must fight vigorously to preserve hard-won humane laws.

Thank you.

Cambodian Issue Sparks Rebellion In GOP Ranks

By WALTER MEARS
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's Republican leadership is showing signs of strain amid the controversy over Cambodia—and there are sounds of rebellion in the ranks.

One GOP critic of the use of American troops in the Cambodian operation has complained to his colleagues the White House won't heed dissent, even Republican dissent.

"There aren't any hands on the handlebars," another Republican senator said. "Who knows what the White House wants?"

Still another Republican said flatly there will be a challenge to Hugh Scott, the party's Senate leader, when GOP senators organize for the next Congress.

"He'd better protect the votes he has," this senator said, asking that his name not be used. "I don't think he's getting any new ones."

The intraparty flap over Scott's leadership is not limited to the Cambodian issue, coming against a backdrop of past controversy concerning President Nixon's two losing Supreme Court nominations and a fight over tax reform.

But Scott, floor leader of a Republican minority sharply divided on the Cambodian issue, reported praise from the White House.

Scott is seeking a compromise on legislation which would forbid spending future U.S. operations in Cambodia.

"The Senate does want to express its opinion on Cambodia, and I want them to have a chance to do so," Scott said.

His initial effort at compromise was disavowed by the White House—after Scott publicly claimed administration support.

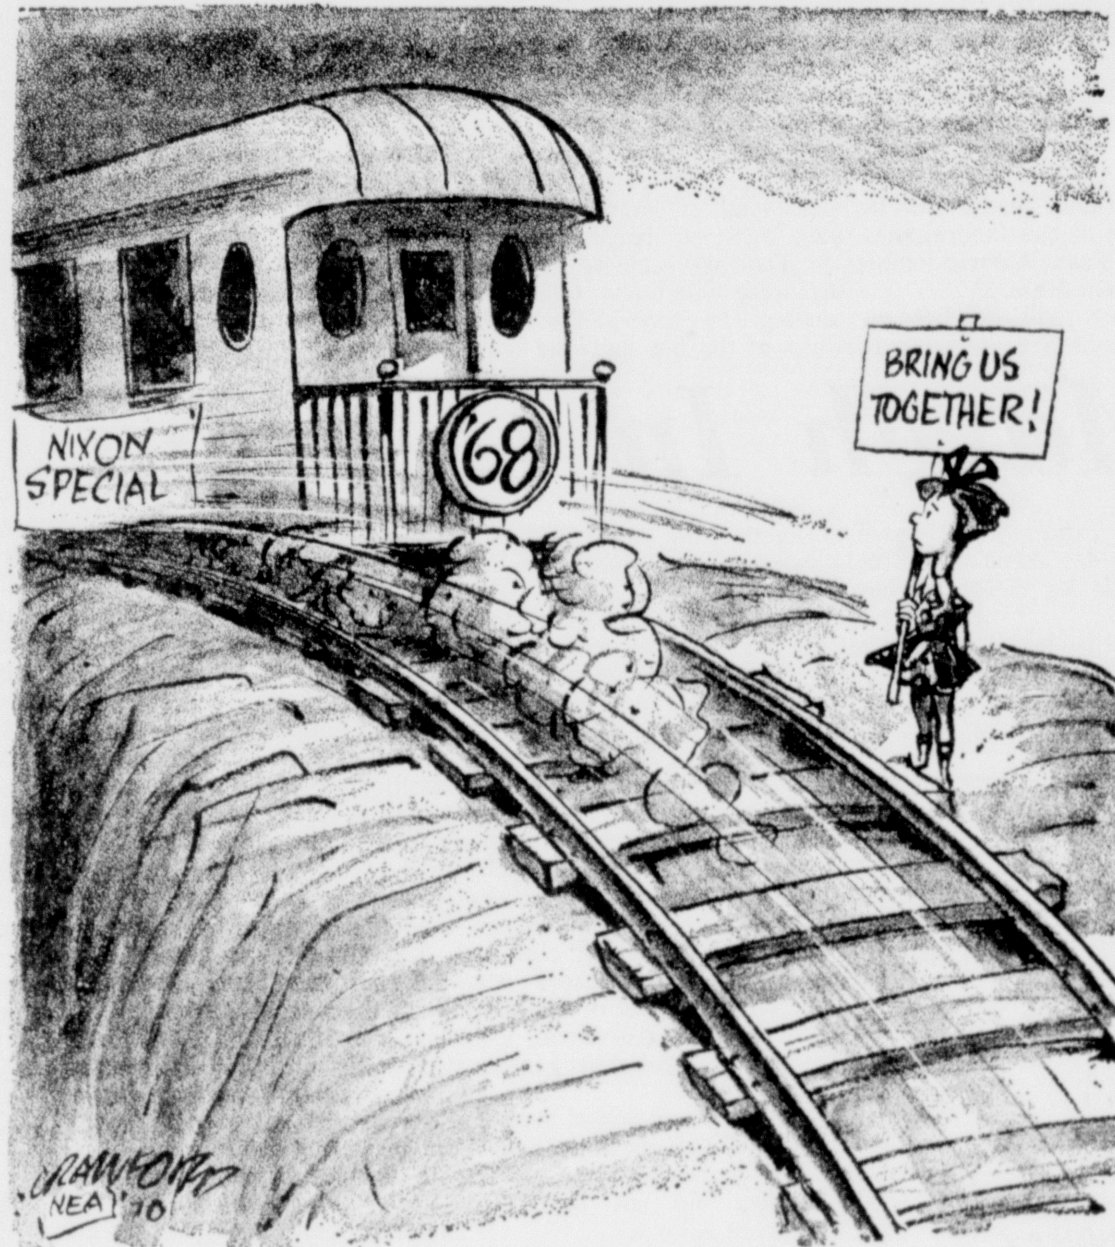

"I am most hopeful that we can work out a consensus rather than a confrontation," Scott said in the Senate Wednesday.

But Sen. Robert P. Griffin, the Republican whip and No. 2 man in the leadership, was less conciliatory.

Griffin said the amendment now before the Senate would "aid the enemy" in Southeast Asia.

"... This is on very dangerous ground," Griffin said. "It gives aid and comfort to the enemy. We should not do it."

Sihanouk's Fall Surprise To U.S.

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA) — It can be said with authority that President Nixon did not know Prince Sihanouk was to be ousted until the news reports arrived from Cambodia.

The White House was as surprised as Hanoi by Lt. Gen. Lon Nol's coup.

The U. S. government had no intelligence operatives in Phnom Penh. This was in consideration of Sihanouk's emotional nature. Washington desired not to upset the prince in any way.

For it can be said with certainty the United States was satisfied on balance with the role that Sihanouk played in the war. This government did not want him overthrown.

In fact, the Department of State for the past two years has done what it could behind the scenes to support Sihanouk nationally and internationally.

It is true Sihanouk did allow the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong to import arms through Sihanoukville. He sold them rice and fish essential for their operations in Vietnam. He allowed them to occupy bases in his country—bases they used to attack South Vietnam.

But Nixon's advisers believed Sihanouk did not have the military power to prevent these things. He was, as they saw it, essentially a captive in a country occupied by invaders immeasurably stronger than he. If he had attempted to throw the North Vietnamese out, or to completely deny them rice or arms, the worry here was the Communists would have taken military action against him and then done what they pleased.

What did Sihanouk do?

As key administration men tell it privately, the prince did ration arms and equipment he allowed the North Vietnamese to bring in through Cambodian ports. He limited rice and fish he supplied their troops. He achieved these results by means of frenetic political maneuvering and posturing. All this was helpful, military men say, to us in the Vietnam war.

Thoughts

Whereas you do not know about tomorrow. What is your life? For you are a mist that appears for a little time and then vanishes.—James 4:14.

Live your life so that whenever you lose, you're ahead.—Will Rogers, American humorist.

The worry in military circles was that if Sihanouk were out the Communists would be able through force to move in greater amounts of arms, requisition more rice and expand their string of Cambodian military bases.

This then is why the United States did not want to upset the status quo in Cambodia under Sihanouk. It explains why we did not attack the North Vietnamese-Viet Cong bases during the years Sihanouk was in power.

Such attacks might have disturbed that balance.

Loyal To Friends Who Mess With Drugs

Dear Ann Landers: I am 16 and worried. Most of my friends smoke pot. Some of them have freaked out on LSD. I don't touch any of it. My folks got upset once when they found an ordinary cigarette butt in my room. They have a good opinion of me and I'd hate to let them down.

Every weekend I wind up with kids who are blowing grass or dropping acid. I realize if they get busted and I'm with them, I will be hauled in and charged, too. This scares me. It would kill my folks. The drug laws are lousy in this state and some good kids have gotten themselves bugged up because they want to show the authorities they have no respect for unjust laws. Please don't tell me to make new friends. I can't. These are the kids I grew up with and I dig them, except for the way they mess with drugs. What should I do?—Loyal Lynn

Dear L.L.: If you insist on hanging around with a crowd that blows grass, drops acid and defies the law, be prepared to accept the consequences. Call it loyalty if you want to. I call it stupidity and short-sightedness.

The law is going to do more busting starting now. Making criminals out of sick people, is, in my opinion, a poor approach to the problem, but when the citizenry becomes frightened and fear takes over, rationality loses out.

There are no easy answers to this one. We cannot afford to turn our country over to a generation of half-stoned pot heads. Nor can we allow potential achievers to fry their brains with LSD, speed and heroin. Unfortunately, a problem that should be handled by physicians is winding up more and more in the hands of the police. So brace yourself. The situation is going to get worse before it gets better.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a message for the young woman who adopted my child. I don't know who she is or where she is, but I'll bet she reads Ann Landers. Will you please print this?

Dear Friend: It was just a few years ago that I gave you my baby. I knew then as I know now, it was the only thing to do. I wanted her to have every advantage in life. I knew I couldn't give her what she was entitled to.

You and your husband wanted a child. The people in charge of the adoption told me as much as they could without revealing your identity. I was certain you would give my little girl oceans of love and that she would have the kind of upbringing every child deserves. I didn't have her long — but I knew she was a very good baby, in perfect health, and beautiful, too. It took more strength to give her up than I thought I had, but I think the good Lord for giving me that strength because I know in my heart it was the right thing to do.

Last year I married a wonderful man. Soon I will have a baby of my own. But I shall never forget my first born. I'll always shed a few quiet tears on her birthday, and wonder where she is, what she looks like and what she is doing. I will always love her — and I will love you, too, for giving her what I could not. May God watch over you and my little girl. — No City No State No Initials

Dear Friend: Thank you for a beautiful letter. I wouldn't dream of printing a clue to your identity. Thousands of women will believe your letter was meant for them. And I wouldn't want it any other way.

Law For Today

Q. Do I have the right to remove a fence that is nailed to fenceposts which are on my property? The fence was already there when I bought the property, but it's unsightly and I'd like to pull it down. My neighbor claims the fence is his and should stand until he sees fit to remove it.

A. A fence might be even more firmly anchored in the law than to the fenceposts. A professional survey of the property lines could help settle any dispute on that score. But there are other questions which could apply, such as: (1) was an easement or license ever granted to permit construction of the fence in a particular place?, or (2) has the fence been in the same place for so long that, by operation of law, a neighbor has a right to maintain it and to use the property on his side of it? The right to remove the fence may hinge on the answer to those questions.

Keeping up with the Joneses would be much easier if they didn't keep trying to go you one better.

We have a very close relative by marriage who spares no expense when the dress shop has a sale.

What we'd like to see on the highway are a few more wreckless drivers.

Wouldn't go so far as to say that the local musical society is impoverished, but they do call their leader the "conductor" because he also takes tickets at the door.

100th Anniversary Marked Of Female Secretary's Debut

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — This year marks the 100th anniversary of the formal debut of one of the heroines of history—the American female secretary.
So let's salute the little lady, once known as "Miss Typewriter," then "Tillie the Toiler," and now the "Girl Friday."
Can you imagine a world without women? Well, that was virtually what the U.S. business office was like back in 1870, when eight young ladies specially trained by the YWCA here marched on the scene.
Male office workers, who wore celluloid cuff protectors and wrote with quill pens, nearly fell off their high stools laughing at these determined girls, prim in long black skirts, high-button shoes and mutton-sleeve white blouses.
But their laughter soon died. The girls proved remarkably efficient at the big, clumsy typewriters of that day.
"By the end of the Gay Nineties only 22 per cent of secretarial jobs were still in male hands," said Robert Murray, an executive with The Edison Voicewriter firm. "And today, of course, an overwhelming majority of the nation's 2½ million or more of the nation's secretaries and stenographers are women." This first great feminist victory in America is far from over. Foreseeing a need of at least 200,000 additional secretaries a year for some time, Murray said:

"Automation, far from making the secretarial role obsolete, has brought about an office revolution which has catapulted the 'Girl Friday' to an envied position," said Murray.
Today's successful secretary is far more than a meek mouse who has moved her workshop from the kitchen to the office. She dresses like a debutante, has her own apartment, visits swank summer resorts, skis in winter if she chooses, and more, and more acts as a trusted confidante and alter ego to her boss.
"Between 1955 and 1969," Murray pointed out, "those earning over $100 weekly rose from five per cent to more than 30 per cent. Top secretaries command salaries of $10,000, and some move into the executive brackets."
"Almost one in five now enjoys a three-week vacation; six per cent get four weeks off." Few actually marry their boss, but at least they don't have to sit on their hands at home waiting for the boy next door to propose.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Heat, Gentle Massage
Help In Osteoarthritis

(Last of Two Related Columns)

By Wayne G. Brandstadt, M.D.

Q—According to my X-ray report, I have a congenital lumbarization of my lumbosacral joint. What does this mean? Is it related to spina bifida?

A—In lumbarization the first segment of the sacrum (normally one solid one) is not fused to the second segment. This is an oddity, not a disease. It is not related to spina bifida.

Q—What is cervical spondylosis? Is there any cure for it?

A—This is a degeneration of the disk between the vertebrae of the neck, a form of osteoarthritis. It is usually an accompaniment of aging. Although there is no cure, the application of heat and gentle massage are helpful. The neck should not be moved forcibly. If the pain is severe and persistent it may be necessary to wear a brace.

Q—I am terrified of bees. A man in the next block has a bee farm so there are always lots of bees around. How can I protect myself when I go out?

A—Bees will not bother you if you don't bother them unless you are wearing perfume or scented cosmetics or a flowery printed dress—plain light colors will not attract them. If you have previously been stung, you may be sensitive to bee venom so, to be on the safe side, you should have your doctor give you desensitizing shots.

Q—Last fall I was stung on the arm by a wasp. The severe itching lasted for two or three days but a dull ache has persisted. What do you advise?

A—Although the pain of a wasp sting is severe, it should not last more than a couple of days. Some other cause for your present pain should be sought.

Q—I have heard that taking vitamin B will keep mosquitoes from biting. Is this true?

A—Very doubtful, but mosquitoes prefer skin that has a temperature over 90 degrees. That is why some persons appear to be immune to their bites.

Their skin temperature hovers between 87 and 89 degrees. Mosquitoes also prefer to bite persons with alcohol in their blood, probably because this increases the skin temperature. Heavy breathing also attracts them.

In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I hope I don't end up like old Mrs. Miffen," said Billie Burke when last we met.

It seems like only a brief span of time, but now I realize it was almost 11 years ago that I had my last interview with the great lady of American theater and films. Like all conscientious performers, she was concerned about her exit.

Mrs. Miffen, she related, had been a legend in the theater. "Old Mrs. Miffen was around 80, but she wouldn't quit. When she curtsied with one of her legs missing, we always wondered if she would be able to get up."

Neither of us knew it at the time, but Miss Burke was then at the end of her career. She had signed to do a western with John Ford, who, like many American men, had adored her on the stage in his youth.

She became inactive and then

was subject to the disabilities of old age. She died last week at 84.

Today's generation knows her principally as Glinda, the good fairy of "The Wizard of Oz." But to the parents and grandparents of America she was a familiar and endearing comedienne.

She played the role over and over again in the movies of the 1930s and 1940s. She floated through scenes in gowns of silk, her lovely hands fluttering like butterflies. She talked incessantly in a tiny voice but never seemed to finish a sentence.

"I don't know exactly how I got started playing flibbertigibbets in pictures," she reflected. "I didn't do that sort of thing on the stage, not at all."

"But they made pictures in the thirties about sophisticated life, and there always seemed to have been a place for the silly, clinging kind of woman that I played. I teamed up with Roland Young, who was a sweet little man with a clipped mustache and a clipped manner. We sort of flittered at each other through picture after picture."

The role was not one that she enjoyed, and occasionally she was able to display her versatility. A notable example: the compassionate neighbor of Rosalind Russell in "Craig's Wife."

Miss Burke had no choice but to continue playing the empty-headed matrons. She needed the work.

Her husband, the great showman Florenz Ziegfeld, had produced the most lavish shows on Broadway and had earned millions. But he died in 1932, he left a monument of debts.

In her later years, Miss Burke returned to the stage now and then, but she deplored what the theater had become.

THE COLONEL RIDES AGAIN

Last week I went to Logansport, Indiana, to pick up more items for the new store, on West Morton & So. West St. I went north on Highway 54 to 24 and east. I feel safe in saying that most of our roads seem to me to have been past covered wagon trails and that each bump and chock hole has been carefully preserved in these roads. It is noted, those who suffer from what T.V. commercials call irregularity need not take any of these remedies, for a quick ride over our highways should solve this problem. If you notice the roads are built by the lay of the land, so when it rains very often roads are flooded. Of course, it was raining and on 54 the water was getting higher and higher. As I was approaching 24, there was this guy in front of me in a row boat. What made me mad was he rowed a left hand turn on to 24 without so much as a turn signal. Lucky for him there wasn't a cop around in a motor boat. I finally made it to Logansport and home again. However, I do realize the Governor is now giving the Highway Dept. their long overdue funds to do a good job they are capable of.

Priest Combines Religion, Ragtime

By MARY KIMBROUGH
Globe-Democrat
Women's Editor

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Rev. Joseph Dustin is a big, genial man with a prayer in his heart, music in his fingers and ragtime in his soul.

He is riverboat jazz in a clerical collar, rollicking show business in a cassock and gaudy salesmanship in the somber garb of a mission priest.

Like his mother before him, he may spend Saturday evening on the bandstand, but he'll spend Sunday morning on his knees.

Father Dustin was a musician long before he became a priest, and the banjo his mother gave him and the songs his father taught him have gone with him all the way.

Today, in addition to his clerical duties with Holy Redeemer parish in Detroit, he is a banjo-strumming businessman, head of his own nonprofit recording company and music publishing house, nationally-recognized jazz musician, composer and recording artist.

His first album contains such nonclerical favorites as "California Here I Come," "There'll Be Some Changes Made," and "Cuddle Up A Little Closer," in addition to six of his own tunes. With him are Stu Sanders and Neal Reid on trombone; Herb Rosin on drums; Nina Santa on piano; Fritz Moore on tenor sax; John Baldori on trumpet and Pete Baldori on bass.

When they swing out, the sounds might well be an echo across the years of Mamie Dustin's south St. Louis band and the vaudeville song-and-dance of Edward Dustin. For it was from his parents, Mamie and Edward—later a motion picture producer—that young Joe inherited a song and it was with Mamie's band that he learned to pluck a tune, first on the mandolin he found in a trash can, later on the banjo his mother gave him.

As would her son some years later, Mamie Dustin walked in two worlds, directing her jazz for Saturday night dances and playing the organ for Sunday Mass at St. Theresa's and Blessed Sacrament.

And, like his mother, Father

Dustin is careful that his own two worlds do not overlap. "I'm old-fashioned," he says with a broad grin. "If I'm supposed to preach a sermon, I'll preach it from the pulpit, not from a bandstand."

"This isn't a medium for a message."

Even so, he has found that music speaks to all men, helps melt the walls between them.

"Many of the people I have met through our performances have come to me with their problems of unhappy marriages or personal doubts. And sometimes, by talking together, they have been helped."

"Musicians, you know, are tremendous people, great people. They're sensitive. They're giving."

Father Dustin, an affable man himself, also has found that in the toe-tapping, rollicking sounds of ragtime, people put aside even their philosophical differences and play in mental, as well as musical harmony.

"At one time, I was in a combo with an Episcopal priest, a Negro baptist minister and a Jewish rabbi. We were dubbed the 'Clerical Four.'

"You know, even without talking religion, you can get people of different faiths together."

But to Father Dustin, music is more than a happy pastime to while away a priest's few leisure hours. It is, to him, "the very air I breathe."

So while, in his heritage of religion and ragtime, the church always has come first, his banjo playing has been almost a second career. When he is on the road, preaching missions, the banjo always goes along and he often may be found in jam sessions with fellow musicians.

He is an honorary member of the New Orleans Jazz Club, has performed on national television and in public performances with top names of show business.

He knows that a song can reach men's hearts when nothing else will. And maybe that's why he figures that religion and ragtime can make good music together.

Quartz is the most common and widely distributed of all minerals and is found in almost every kind of rock.

AREA METHODIST WSCS MEETINGS

The WSCS of the Brooklyn United Methodist church met at the home of Mrs. Barbara Woodridge May 11.

The program opened with group singing led by Mrs. Joan Quigg. Mrs. Margaret Quigg gave the lesson on The Individual, the Prisoner, the Community. She was assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth Leitze, Mrs. Frances Huffman and Mrs. Alice Willis.

Roll was answered by 14 members and three guests, Mrs. Fern Crain, Mrs. Donna Oldham and Mrs. Gloria Stocker.

A Church World Service clothing drive will be held May 23 and 24 with the collection center at Central Christian church. The secretary and treasurer gave their reports. A letter was read from the treasurer of Church Women United in regard to the support of the Day Care Center and a thank-you note read from Rev. and Mrs. Lauer.

Officers training school will be July 14 at Camp Point. Mrs. Irene Bond reported on her attendance at the Society conference held in Bloomington.

The Society decided to hold a yard sale Friday, May 22, in the church yard.

New officers were nominated and elected. They are president, Mrs. Margaret Quigg; vice president, Mrs. Elizabeth Leitze; secretary, Mrs. Alice Willis; treasurer, Mrs. Phyllis Hubbard; chairman of Christian social relations, Mrs. Mary Craig.

Mrs. Barbara Woodridge gave a short history of Memorial Day. Mrs. Donna Oldham and Mrs. Gloria Stocker were accepted as new members in the society.

Chemist Never Tires Of Testing

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Raymond Vandaveer just eats his work up.

He's a guy who eats for a living as an organic chemist and a food taster for a Dallas-based food company.

Vandaveer can nibble professionally at potato chips all day, then enjoy them at home at night.

"I prefer potato chips," he says. "Or corn chips or tortilla chips or pretzels."

Don't think it's all eat and no drink, either. Vandaveer has been known to sample 100 cans of cream at one sitting.

"You don't get tired of sampling the same thing over and over, if it's a good food. That's the key. On my first job, I tasted and tested the No. 10 cans of pineapple being used by the Army. It was a lot of pineapple, but it was good pineapple."

Vandaveer admits to some over-eating, but he says it's not the food he eats while at work that results in the excess poundage.

"I have developed my taste buds to such an extent that I am very aware of good food, and it does tend to make me over-eat after hours," he says.

Vandaveer also doesn't take his food lightly.

"Some people are influenced by the color of foods. They judge a glass of tomato juice on how red it is. They taste the same juice that has a greenish tint and they won't touch it. We put on special lights and all the food is the same color."

Aspiring food testers should be made aware of the fact that the tester has to pass some tests before he can administer them.

"They're asked to put in order according to saltiness and sweetness the foods we give them to sample. We also give them three products, two of which are exactly the same. If they can't tell that two are the same, then we can't use them."

Vandaveer also comes up with new flavors for corn and potato chips. He fathered the tortilla-flavored corn chip, but can't quite capture the flavor of guacamole, which is made with avocados.

Vandaveer admittedly has trouble drawing the line between work and home. He says his wife is an excellent cook, but the food at home gets tested too.

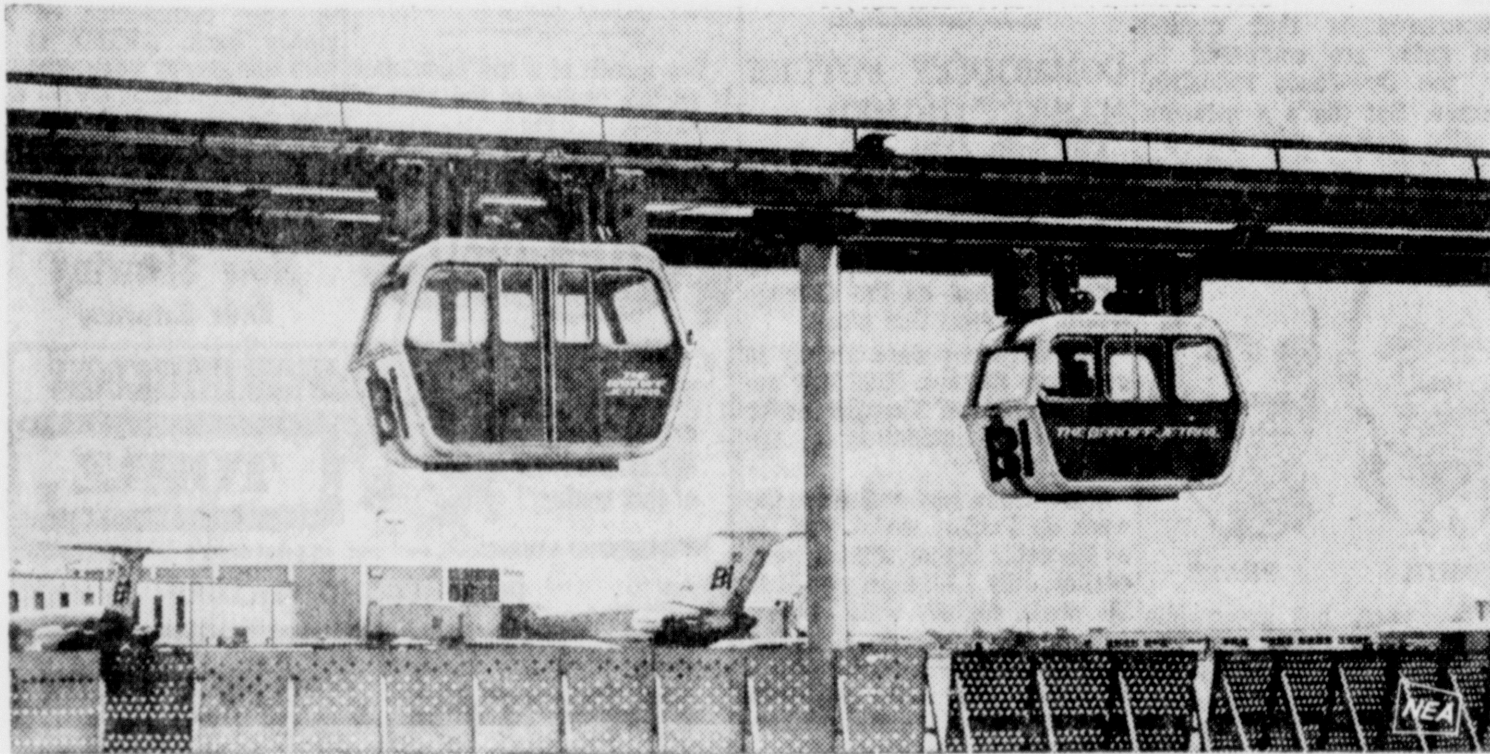

Vandaveer says he gets many ideas from his wife, but still hasn't caught up with that elusive guacamole.

PUBLIC PLANS

DURHAM, England (AP) — The Home Office, in charge of British jails, is taking steps to keep architects' plans of prisons out of the hands of the public. Officials learned recently that plans of the top-security wing at Durham prison could be bought at the county library for sixpence a copy.

SCIENCE PAYS

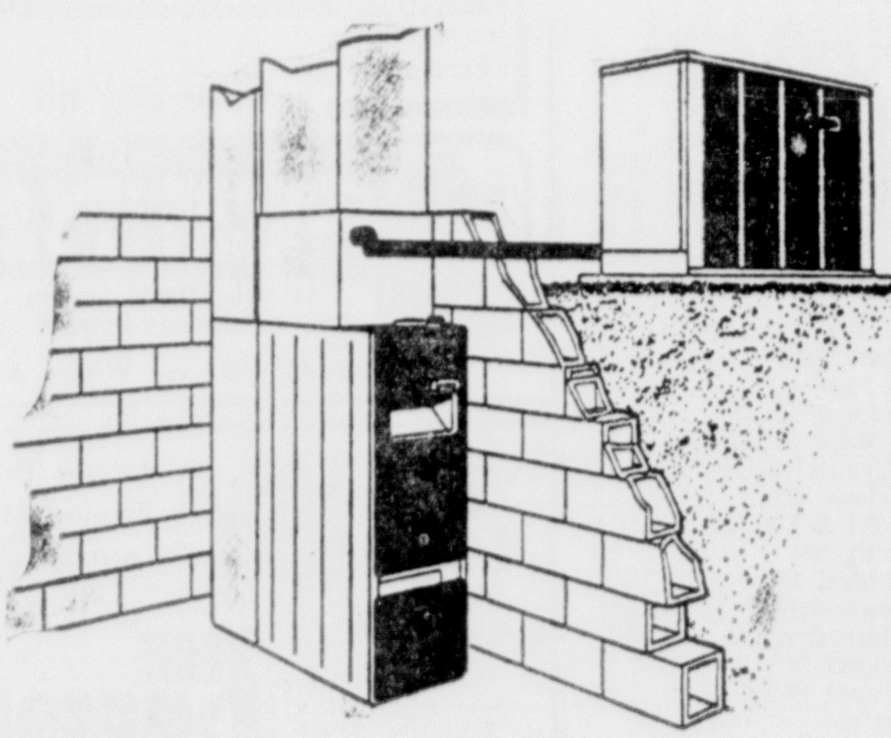

LONDON (AP) — It pays to graduate as a scientist in Britain. A government survey shows that two-thirds of graduate scientists earn more than $4,800 a year but that two-thirds of the scientists who did not graduate earn less than $4,800 a year.

Business — Market Wrapup

Business Mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Consumers, capital and Cambodia are the three major determinants of where the American economy goes from here. Among the directions it can take at this juncture are recession, stability, inflation, expansion or some combination.

The importance of consumer sentiment is based not only on such hard statistical evidence as the growing rate of joblessness, but on a possible pessimistic turn in consumer psychology.

Past studies have shown that consumer buying moods are based not only on the ability to buy—as measured by jobs, payrolls and savings—but on less obvious influences, such as hope or discouragement over the Indochina war.

While it has been government policy to dampen the spending desires of consumers, some economists now are concerned that an overflow of bad news might drown out all but utterly essential spending.

Pessimism is widespread throughout the financial world, evidence of which is reported daily in stock market reports, and it has persisted so long now that the contagion could spread to consumer sales. A sharp drop in retail sales would signal the arrival of a recessionary psychology, or the development of an overly cautious attitude toward the future, marked by more enthusiasm for conserving than for construction expansion.

The capital situation involves an upcoming tug-of-war for funds that could push interest rates even higher than they are now. Industry has enormous spending plans; the economy does not have the funds for them to use.

Some corporations already are beginning to scrap these expansion plans because of the money shortage or because they are unwilling to pay high rates. But others may be in the game until the rope breaks.

If the demand persists, the resulting snap would be felt throughout the economy. Corporate treasurers vividly remember that back in late 1966 they had to scramble wildly for funds to finance projects to which they were committed.

Assume, however, that the inability to finance will cause corporations to simply drop their expansion plans far enough ahead to avoid being caught in such a bind.

Will massive scrapping of plans push interest rates and the inflation thermometer higher? The experts are divided. Perhaps neither extreme will result. Perhaps the forces will balance each other out.

The Cambodian problem is as difficult to analyze as the others, especially for those who try to read meaning into the stock market. Unable to develop any inside information on the war, stock analysis is this: If the war spreads it is bad for the stock market; if the Cambodian maneuver eventually reduces the conflict, the market will rise.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices dropped again Friday, but at a much slower clip than in the previous sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed off 3.08 at 662.17, its lowest level since March 1, 1963, when it stood at 659.72.

Friday's decline brought the total loss in the Dow average since Tuesday to 40.64 points.

One analyst, who appeared to voice the opinions of many financial observers, said that "the lack of confidence in the White House is reflected in the stock market. If people had the confidence in the White House that they should have, they would start buying."

The market, in the course of Friday's session, fluctuated rather widely, with the Dow Jones average ahead as much as 4.59 points early in the session and behind as much as 8.08 in the afternoon session.

Of the 1,599 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, 515 advanced, and 797 declined. New yearly lows were touched by 519 issues and highs by none.

Volume on the Big Board declined to 12.17 million shares from 16.71 million shares Thursday.

The New York Stock Exchange Index of some 1,200 common stocks declined 0.02 to 39.44. The Associated Press 60-stock average slipped 1.1 to 233.2, its lowest level since Nov. 19, 1962. Industrials were off .6, rails off 1.5 and utilities, off .2.

The number of blocks of 10,000 or more shares traded on the Big Board declined to 52 from 80 Thursday. The largest block of the session was 185,600 shares of Deere, which traded at 30 1/2. The issue closed off 1 at 30 1/2.

The American Stock Exchange price index slipped .11 to 20.06. Of the 1,075 issues traded, 307 advanced and 500 declined. Volume declined to 4.08 million shares from 5.71 million shares Thursday.

Stocks Or Mutuals? Data Favors Funds

By CARLTON SMITH and RICHARD PUTNAM PRATT

Another answer has been offered to the eternal (well, frequent) question: Does an investor fare better by putting his money into mutual funds or into individual stocks?

It's not an easy one to answer because you also have to ask, "What stocks?" Many brokers maintain they can pick a sufficient number of winners for their customers to outpace the mutual funds.

One mutual fund manager who'll argue that point is Milton Mound, president of First Multifund of America, a different kind of fund that invests in other funds—29 of them, currently. He has worked up a table comparing average mutual fund performance to average performance of stocks as measured by three popular market indexes.

One flaw in many such comparisons is that mutual fund gains are compared to, say, the Dow-Jones Industrial average. But that's a measure of price change only. The average price for this group of stocks may rise only 9 per cent as 10 years' compounded growth:

DJI, unadjusted	17.35 P.C.
DJI, with dividends	64.48 P.C.
S&P 500 Stocks	53.76 P.C.
NYSE Composite	60.25 P.C.
All mutual funds	121.62 P.C.
Growth funds	157.56 P.C.

The top - performing 272 growth funds posted these average gains, or losses, in individual years during the decade, beginning with 1960: plus 5.2 per cent, plus 31.1 per cent, minus 18.5 per cent, plus 19.5 per cent, plus 10.5 per cent, plus 27.7 per cent, minus 5.4 per cent, plus 44.7 per cent, plus 17.9 per cent, minus 15.8 per cent. (Ah, 1967! Will we see it like again?)

On this Mound rests his case: "We believe that your chances for long-term financial success are significantly improved by investing in mutual funds, instead of directly in stock exchange securities."

COMMODITY FUTURE MARKET HIGHER

CHICAGO (AP) — A strong speculative demand for wheat, corn and soybeans futures, generally influenced by the weather, sent these commodity prices sharply higher on the Chicago Board of Trade this week.

The advances were mainly in new crop months. The May option expired on Tuesday under quite active liquidation in the major pits.

When trade had ended for the week on Friday, wheat was 1 1/4 to 2 1/4 cents higher than a week earlier, July 1.38; corn was 3/4 to 2 1/2 cents higher, July 1.30; soybeans were 1/2 lower to 1/4 higher, July 65 1/2; rye was unchanged to 1/4 lower, July 1.08; soybeans were 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 cents higher, July 2.72.

The principal grain commodities as well as those in the soybean complex were under liquidation early in the week by longs who preferred not to take delivery of May contracts at their expiration at noon, Tuesday. The next day, with reports of rain, hail and thunderstorms in areas where the new corn and soybeans crops are in the ground or about to be seeded, these futures became attractive to the trading element. Oats and rye generally followed the buying pattern set in corn and wheat.

Can't Talk Yourself Onto Talk Shows

By LEE MUELLER
NEW YORK (NEA) — ITEM: Dr. David Reuben, the man who wrote the No. 1 nonfiction best seller about sex and the things you've been afraid to ask about it, says much of his book's success can be traced to television talk shows. "My biggest sales surge followed guest appearances on the Dick Cavett and Johnny Carson shows," he said. Reuben was here for taping with Merv Griffin and David Frost.

So you want to appear on a TV talk show? Want to sell something, eh? Yourself, maybe? Want to be interrupted for an over-the-hill commercial? Want the action that late-evening tube exposure can give, hmmm?

Forget it.

According to an irrefutable survey (my own), the odds against us common folk sitting down with Johnny and Dick and Merv would make Jimmy the Greek froth at the mouth. "There's very little chance that the man on the street could walk in here and convince us that he ought to be on the program," said John Gilroy, who produces the Cavett show.

"We sometimes ask a non-celebrity to be on," said a spokesman for The Tonight Show, "but unless you've shot a vending machine or something, your chances are pretty slim."

Merv Griffin probably has more unknown talent on his program than either of the other two, but it's planned that way. (Talent, it should be explained here, is not necessarily entertainment ability. The ability to know what you're talking about, for instance, is deemed a talent.) "We're the only show that has open auditions for talent," said Griffin, "but it has to be talent."

Don't even consider the Frost show. It's more picky about guess than any of the others. "David's not in the business of discovering talent," an official said. "We're in the position of selling the show with the biggest names possible."

The biggest names possible do not include writers or artists or scientists or politicians. (These fellows are called "second-stringers" by officials and, says one, "When you get down to selecting second-stringers for the show, you have to be very careful. If they don't have a rapport with the host, they can kill the show and hurt your ratings. With headliners—mostly old-line movie stars—you don't really care whether they get along with the host or not."

If you don't mind being a second-stringer, however, there are methods by which one can get on the show. Probably the easiest method is to get yourself swallowed by a python snake. The next easiest is to write a book or invent a cure for something one of the hosts is suffering from—although this is certainly no guarantee.

In most instances, the host actually has very little to say about whom he interviews. Guest selections generally are made by the producer and a group of talent co-ordinators. Consequently there have been times when a host wound up joking with a headliner he actually hated in private. (Networks are reticent to cite examples of this phenomenon.)

After being swallowed by a python, the first thing you do is hire an agent. "We rarely deal with people who attempt to deal for themselves," said a talent co-ordinator. "It's just not the way we like to do things unless we go after the talent ourselves."

Most first-time guests are preinterviewed by show representatives so the host will know what you're going to talk about. This is so the host or his writers can come up with clever remarks about being swallowed by pythons. (Keep your clever remarks to yourself.)

"Second-string guests are not necessarily foils for the host," says a public relations man. "It usually just works out that way. I mean, if the guest ever uses the host for a foil, we'll probably fire the host and hire the guest."

Lastly, do not expect to make millions from your talk show debut. Elizabeth Taylor got $265 for appearing on the Frost show. Why should you expect more?

"People come on these shows for exposure," said the talent co-ordinator, "and they usually get it—one way or another."

Putting The Bite On Mindless Tongue

I intend to become actively engaged in an endeavor called The Society for the Prevention of Making Inane Remarks.

There is a simple test devised to enable one to discover if he makes inane remarks. Upon observing a weeping child standing in front of a drugstore, a melted, ant-covered Popsicle on the sidewalk before him, you are ready for membership in the society if you say, "Oh! You dropped your Popsicle!"

(Saying, "May as well learn not to cry over spilled Popsicles!" is worse than inane. Remarking, "I'll bet those ants think today is Christmas and you're Santa Claus!" is better. Saying nothing or just handing the poor kid 15 cents is best.)

Once a person has his inane remarks to children under control, he can work on the habit of making remarks calculated to show others they aren't quite so mentally alert as he is.

I have been practicing the art of assuming my husband can see the obvious. And, hopefully, in the near future I'll stop saying to him, "Get the cream, please—it's in the refrigerator," or, "Bring the coffee, dear, the pot is on the stove." (After all, do I really think he's going to look in the breadbox?)

I may even convince him he need not explain the obvious to me, as he did yesterday when he handed me a claim slip and said, "Would you pick up my shirts? They're at the laundry." (Did he honestly believe that without his direction I'd have asked for them at the bowling alley?)

With this kind of attitude I'm sure we'll soon be to the point where we no longer make senseless remarks to each other at all. When I am washing windows, he won't greet me with, "Washing the windows this afternoon?"

When he drops a light bulb in the kitchen sink, I won't say, "You dropped a light bulb in the sink!"

If he ever slips and falls down the stairs again, I'm certain I won't rush to him and exclaim, "Honey! You fell down the stairs!"

And, from this point, it will be only a tiny step to refraining from remarking about the Almost Obvious. He won't say things like, "I borrowed $10—I got it from your billfold." And I won't say, "May I use your pen—it's there in your coat pocket," as if he's too stupid to see it.

Other than fewer frayed nerves, I'm not sure what this

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)

The short circuit that nearly caused the deaths of the three

Apollo 13 astronauts also may put a crimp in the space agency's plans to explore the moon.

The accident that exploded an oxygen tank 205,000 miles from earth already has delayed the Apollo 14 flight two months, possibly longer. It threatens additional stretchouts in the Apollo program, with a chance that two or three moon landing missions might be cancelled.

Mishaps have occurred in flight before, fortunately without American fatalities. But three astronauts died in a launch pad fire.

However, none of the previous incidents caused the searching reappraisals of this nation's space program that has resulted from Apollo 13.

The earlier accidents occurred before Americans landed on the moon. There was a goal to be met, and the space agency, with the backing of Congress and the public, pressed ahead.

More than $800 million was spent to redesign the Apollo spaceship after three Apollo 1 astronauts died in a flash fire

during a routine launch pad test in January, 1967. There was a delay of 21 months in Apollo flights, but the effort paid off with six nearly flawless missions culminating with the Apollo 11 and 12 moon landings last year.

Apollo 13 ended the string

when its service module oxygen tanks erupted and astronauts

James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W.

Haise Jr. and John L. Swigert

Jr. had to fight for survival for four days before returning safely to earth.

Now the mood of Congress and the people is vastly different. There are other more pressing concerns, and the moon no longer is a goal.

So there is no great hurry to fly again.

The House Appropriations

Committee on May 7 suggested that Apollo 14 be postponed from its planned Oct. 1 launch date until next year and that moon flights be cut back from two to one a year. The recommendation accompanied a $136

million slash in NASA's 1971

budget, already at its lowest point in years.

Later that day, Dr. Thomas

O. Paine, NASA administrator, announced: "Our present as-essment is that the modifications to the oxygen tanks in the service module that have already been indicated will require several months and that

Apollo 14 cannot be launched

Before the Apollo 13 incident, most other major in-flight problems occurred in earth orbit with the spaceships only 100 or so miles away. If necessary, they could return to any point on earth within 20 minutes by firing retrorockets as the Gemini

8 astronauts did in 1966 when their ship tumbled out of control.

The Apollo 13 emergency may result in a change of emphasis from lunar exploration to the development of new capabilities in space close to earth.

The findings and recommendations of the Apollo 13 review board will be important to the future course of the manned space program. Its report is expected about June 1.

The board, headed by Edgar

M. Cortright, director of

NASA's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va., said preliminary investigation indicates the explosion probably was caused by an electrical short circuit. Experts believe the short occurred either in a fan used to stir supercold oxygen in the tank, or in wiring leading to the fan.

In the presence of pure oxygen, the short could have ignited insulation wires or even the aluminum parts within the tank.

The resulting heat would have produced the pressure that burst the tank.

Dr. George Low, deputy

NASA administrator, said possible changes before the next lunar mission include elimination of the stirring fans from both oxygen tanks and relocation of temperature and quantity

probes and heaters outside the tanks. In addition, all non-me-talic material such as insulation might be removed, as well as aluminum or anything else that might react with oxygen.

The safe return of Apollo 13

once again proved the value of man in overcoming problems in space flight, with help from the ground. It was the 13th time in 23 flights that astronauts had to take corrective action to save a mission. Among them:

John H. Glenn Jr., America's

first orbiting astronaut, experienced failure of a small control

jet during his Friendship 7 flight

Feb. 20, 1962. He took manual control of the craft, which was designed to operate automatically, and flew the mission to completion.

A short circuit in M. Scott

Carpenter's Aurora 7 ship

fouled up the device that told him what angle his capsule nose was pointed. He aligned the ship to what he thought was the correct position by looking at the horizon and was able to achieve the approximate re-entry angle, although he overshot the intended landing area by 250 miles.

That was May 24, 1962.

L. Gordon Cooper's Faith 7

flight May 15-16, 1963 ran into trouble when a faulty tube leaked water into electronic circuits. A panel light blinked on, indicating the pull of gravity and premature re-entry. Ground stations calculated he still was maintaining orbital speed. But because of fear the water may have short-circuited the automatic re-entry system, Cooper was directed to fly the capsule manually back to earth.

Gemini 5 astronauts Cooper and Charles Conrad Jr. overcame a fuel cell power system problem after it appeared they might have to make an emergency landing after only nine hours in space. They completed their full eight days, Aug. 21-29, 1965.

On Dec. 12, 1965, Gemini 6

astronauts Walter M. Schirra Jr.

and Thomas P. Stafford were ready to take off from Cape

Kennedy in pursuit of Gemini 7 astronauts Frank Borman and Lovell. The engines of their Titan 2 rocket ignited, but quickly died and the rocket remained locked firmly on the pad.

It was a potentially explosive situation and command pilot

Schirra had the choice of triggering ejection seats or remaining in the cabin. In a split second he assessed that the rocket had not lifted off—even though a light in the cabin indicated it had—and decided to stay put.

A plug that sends the liftoff display signal had fallen away prematurely. Schirra's clear thinking saved the flight, and three days later Gemini 6 took off and executed the first space rendezvous with Gemini 7.

Minutes after Gemini 8 astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and David R. Scott executed the world's first linkup, with an

Agna rocket, March 16, 1966, a spacecraft thruster stuck open and sent the combined vehicles into wild gyrations. The astronauts fought a 30-minute battle to disengage from the Agna

and shut off the thruster and then made an emergency landing in the Pacific Ocean.

Gemini 12 pilots Lovell and

Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. overcame troubles with a fuel cell and three bad thrusters to complete their four-day trip, Nov. 11-15, 1966.

That concluded the Gemini program and the U.S. was ready to move quickly into

Apollo flights. But the pace was slowed by the Jan. 27, 1967,

Apollo 1 fire that killed Virgil

I. Grissom, Edward H. White II

and Roger B. Chaffee. The fire was caused by a short circuit in electrical wiring.

Apollo 7 became the first

Apollo manned flight Oct. 11,

1968. Three days into the mission, red lights flashed, warning that the main power system had failed. Walter Cunningham swiftly figured there was an electrical overload and pressed

TAX EXEMPTION FOR SOME HAS NEW CLAIM FORM

SPRINGFIELD — The Internal Revenue Service has announced the availability of a new Form W-4E for taxpayers who may be entitled to claim exemption from having income tax withheld from their salaries.

Jay G. Philpott, District director for Central and Southern Illinois, explained that students working for the summer, retired persons, and other part-time workers, or employees who had no income tax liability last year and anticipates none this year, should file Withholding Exemption Certificate, Form W-4E with their employers and claim this exemption.

Philpott added, "For 1970, a single person who makes less than $1,725 will not owe any tax. This is based on the $1,100 low income allowance and a personal exemption of $625. A taxpayer over 65 can earn wages up to $2,350 without incurring a tax liability."

Anyone who qualifies can fill out the form and give it to his employer so that withholding tax will not be withheld on his wages.

Employers may obtain the new Form W-4E from any IRS office or from Forms, P.O. Box 1468, Springfield, Illinois 62705.

A free pamphlet, Publication 553, listing the Highlights of 1969 Changes in the Tax Law is also available upon request.

Tight Race Seen For Tennis Meet

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Evanston with 10 points, Ottawa with 9 and Libertyville with 8 appear ready to fight for the Illinois state high school tennis crown entering Saturday's wind-up.

Each had performers going for them in Saturday's semifinals with Libertyville seeming to be in the best scoring position with its brother combination of sophomore Grey King and senior Bruce.

Grey, defending champion and No. 1 seeded, moved up with a quarter-final victory Friday over Dave Brown, New Trier East, 6-1, 6-0.

Bruce, No. 3 advanced by defeating Doug Sullivan of Hinsdale Central 6-3, 1-6, 6-3. The brothers are in opposite brackets and could meet in the finale.

Meanwhile, No. 2 Jerry Karzen of New Trier West, gained the semis with a 1-6, 8-6, 6-4 triumph over Kevin Morrey of Harvey Thornton. The only major upset came when No. 4 Pete Armstrong of Oak Park-River Forest was eliminated in the quarter-finals by Blair Neller of Deerfield 8-6, 6-2.

Another upset came in the third round of the doubles when No. 4 Roger Converse-Ian Harris of Aurora West lost to Jack Neems-Bill Royal, Evanston, 6-3, 7-9, 6-4.

Advancing to the semifinals were No. 1 John Shostrom-Bill Dutton, Oak Park-River Forest; No. 2 Steve Briggs-Dick Hainline, Rock Island, and No. 3 Eric Friedler-Bob Thompson, Evanston.

Weiskopf Takes Over Sole Lead In Atlanta Golf

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, snapping out of a slump, continued to dominate the Atlanta Country Club Course and took sole control of the second-round lead in the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic Friday with a four-under-par 68.

Weiskopf, a boyishly-hand, some lanky lad from Cleveland, had a 36-hole total of 133, a record 11-under-par on the tough 7,053-yard, par-72 layout and one stroke in front of long-shot Chuck Courtney.

Courtney charged in with a second consecutive 67 on the hilly, sweltering hot course for 134.

Homero Blancas, the happy hombre from Houston who broke a four-year victory drought last week and had shared the first round lead with the 6-foot-3 Weiskopf, stumbled in with a 74 and slipped well back in the pack with a 74 for 139.

A trio of tough veterans shared third at 136, three back of the 26-year-old Weiskopf. They were South African Gary Player, Dan Sikes and Tommy Aaron. Sikes had the low round of the day, a seven-under-par 65. Player and Aaron each had 68s.

They were followed by 49-year-old Australian veteran Kel Nagle, Bob Lunn and defending champion Bert Yancey at 137. Lunn had a 68, Nagle a 69 and Yancey a 70.

Jack Nicklaus, with a second consecutive 69, topped the group at 18 and Arnold Palmer managed a 70 for 19, six strokes back.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Hickman drove in three runs with a homer and a double and Jim Colborn worked 4 1-3 innings of scoreless relief as the Chicago Cubs defeated the New York Mets 6-4 Friday night.

Hickman hammered a two-run homer off New York starter Jerry Koosman in the first inning and then added another run with his fifth inning double.

Ken Holtzman, staked to an early four-run lead, was jolted for seven hits including a homer by Donn Clendenon and was lifted with two out in the fifth.

Colborn came on to retire pinch hitter Ken Boswell, leaving two Mets stranded in the fifth and allowed only two base runners the rest of the way to earn his first victory.

Koosman gave up three runs in the first and was lifted in the second when he pulled a muscle in his left forearm.

Jim Dowland Among Top Prep Golfers

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Homewood-Flossmoor compiled a best four-man score of 303 Friday to take a three-stroke lead over Galesburg in the opening round of the 36-hole Illinois State High School Golf Tournament.

The meet, winding up Saturday, is played on two University of Illinois courses, the Orange course with par 72 and the Blue with 73. Despite the difference in par, the Orange links is considered much tougher.

Sophomore Dave Johnson of Joliet West, playing the Blue, captured the individual lead with 33-38—71. More impressive, however, was Don Wiebring of Quincy Christian Brothers with 37-35—72 on the Orange.

Jacksonville's Jim Dowland was tied for eighth in the individual standings, while the Crimson were in 17th place out of 23 teams after the first day of the Illinois State High School Golf Tournament Friday.

Dowland fired a 38-36—74 over the par 73 Blue Course, considered the easier of the two courses. Crimson's Gary Hutchison with a 42-39—81 and J. D. Evans with a 46-44—90 also played the Blue Course.

Mike Way had a 42-41—83 and Bill Kline 45-43—88 over the tougher Orange Course with a 36-36—72 par.

Only the low four are counted in the team scores.

The players alternate courses. West Joliet and defending champion Belleville West were tied for third in the team race with 308 each.

Other team leaders included Naperville and Waukegan 309; Quincy, Maine East and New Trier West 312; Champaign Central 316; Decatur MacArthur and Pekin 318; Rockford East 319, and LaGrange Lyons and Normal University 320.

Wesley, who played at the university of Kansas, was the NO. 1 draft choice of the Cincinnati Royals.

Alton, Bloom Gird For Cinder Honors

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Tom Stock, Belleville West senior, set a record in the shot put while defending champion Alton and Bloom of Chicago Heights girded for a battle for the team title in preliminaries of the Illinois State High School Track Meet Friday.

Stock, 6-2, 211-pound football lineman who in the last two years failed to qualify for the finals, pushed the shot 63 feet, 8½ inches to erase the record of 62-10¼ by Hershel Benberry of Bloom in 1967.

Stock will have three more chances in Saturday's finals to surpass his Friday effort. His best of the season is 64-1½.

Meanwhile, Alton's Redbirds, winner of the team crown four times in the last eight years, qualified their 880 and mile relay teams and gained three individual berths on Saturday's 15-event windup of the 76th annual meet. Gail Murphy qualified in both the 220 and 100 and Milt Johnson in the 440.

Bloom's Trojans, champions for four straight years beginning in 1956 but not since, also qualified both relay teams as well as Jerry Doster in the high jump, John Sarros in the pole vault; Bruce Murray, 180-year low hurdles, and Henry Kennedy, 440.

York of Elmhurst gained four places and East St. Louis and Chicago Englewood three each—but none of them had two relay teams still in action. The meet could well be decided in the relays.

Gaining two berths were Ottawa, Belleville West, Calumet, Granite City, East Moline, Glenbard West, Evanston, Riverside-Brookfield, Willowbrook, East St. Louis Lincoln and Niles North.

The best qualifying relay times were by East Moline in the 880 with 1:23.6 and Bloom in the mile with 3:20.2, which tops the Trojans' state best of the season of 3:21.4 prior to the meet.

The only defending champion in the field, Gail Sweet of Colfax Octavia, easily qualified for the high jump finals.

Four records were disallowed because of an aiding wind over the limit of 4.473 mph. Mike Allen of Granite City raced to a 19.4 in preliminaries of the 180-yard low hurdles around a curve compared to the 19.6 standard. Later, in a semifinal heat, he and Lonnie Brown of Chicago Englewood logged 19.5.

Freshman Howard Jones of Evanston took aim on the oldest mark in the book in the 100-yard dash and was timed in :09.5. But he was backed by an 8 mile per hour breeze. The record is :09.6 by Jim Golliday of Chicago Phillips in 1960.

In the 120-yard high hurdles, Steve Whitmore of Calumet had :14.0 against the :14.1 mark, but again was wind-aided.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — "It will be a long trip home if I don't get a spot in the 500, but there will be joy in Australia if I do."

That is the word from Kevin Bartlett, one of 20 or so drivers who held final practice Friday before the windup of qualifying for the Memorial Day 500-mile race.

Only six berths remain open in the starting grid, limited to the 33 fastest cars. Twenty-seven drivers qualified last week, but of these at least two stand in danger of being bumped from the lineup by faster cars.

Like most other observers, Bartlett believes a four-lap speed of 164 miles per hour will put him in the field. Rookie Steve Krisloff, was last Saturday's slowest qualifier at 162.488 m.p.h. Veteran Jim McElreath was Sunday's tailender at 163.592.

Bartlett, a 30-year-old former Australian sports car champion, came to the U.S. earlier this year to try his luck on the U.S. Auto Club's highly profitable championship trail.

Originally assigned to drive an Eisert-stock-block Ford in the Indianapolis 500, he got a break when Peter Revson gave up his Marauder-turbocharged Ford to drive one of the new McLaren cars. Bartlett has been running in the 164-165 bracket since then and has a top lap of 165.7 in Thursday's practice period.

"It is a good car," the 6-foot-11 Australian said. "I just hope I don't foul up during qualifying. The car should be in the field and it should finish well."

Bartlett figures he has driven about 150 laps on the weather-beaten old Speedway since passing his rookie test earlier in the month.

"It is quite different from the race tracks back home, where road racing is about all we have. It took a while to get used to the sweeping turns, but it isn't too bad once you find the groove."

With the end of Thursday's practice, 54 drivers had made shakedown runs. Of these 37 are veterans of at least one Indy 500, and 32 were in last year's race. And three-Mario Andretti, A. J. Foyt and Bobby Unser — are former winners.

Economist Speaks On Flood's Behalf

Ruby Towed In For Sixth Time At Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Luckless Lloyd Ruby, one of the highest ranking drivers still unqualified for the 54th 500-mile auto race May 30, had to be towed in for the sixth time this year Friday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The Texan, five times along the top 10 in the rich Memorial Day race, was stalled in his practice run by a broken ring and pinion gear. His crew hopes to have the car ready to go again Saturday in the next-to-last qualifying session.

Mario Andretti, last year's winner, practiced at more than 167 miles per hour Friday while most of the unqualified drivers were struggling to reach 165. Andretti qualified last weekend.

Six spots are left in the 33-car starting field.

"We think it will take 166 to stay in contention on Memorial Day," said Andy Granatelli, owner of Andretti's German-built McNamara-Ford.

If the STP Corp. president has the field evaluated right, the race a week from Saturday will be far and away the fastest since the American auto classic began in 1911.

The race record for the full distance is Andretti's 156.867 m.p.h. last year.

The record at the 200-mile mark is 158.901 last year by Lloyd Ruby, who isn't even in the field of 27 cars qualified last weekend. The record at 250 miles is 159.039 two years ago by Bobby Unser, on his way to victory.

Bobby and Mario already are qualified to start in the third of the three-car rows in the 33-car lineup.

Bobby's brother Al, who never has won the race, captured the pole position last weekend at a four-lap average of 170.221 m.p.h.

Ruby was stymied in the first weekend of the 10-mile trials by the bad luck of having three engines quit on him. He was running easily Friday at well over 165 m.p.h. and rated an almost certain qualifier Saturday.

After the six open positions are filled, a driver can still make the field by posting a better speed than the slowest of the 33 in the lineup.

Illinois State Is Upset, 4-3

NORMAL, Ill. (AP)—Defending champion Illinois State was upset by Southern Illinois University of Edwardsville, 4-3, Friday in the second round of the NCAA Midwest College Regional Baseball Tournament.

Dave Hayes singled across the winning SIU run from third in the seventh inning after Illinois State held an earlier 3-2 lead. It was Illinois State's first loss in the double-elimination tournament.

Southern Illinois, with Steve Malone taming Illinois State on a five-hitter, moves into Saturday's title round with a 2-0 tournament record.

Michigan Sweeps Two From Illini

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The University of Michigan made good use of its freshmen to sweep a baseball doubleheader from Illinois, 6-1 and 3-1, Friday.

Pitcher Pete Helt, a freshman southpaw, gave up only four hits and the sole Illini run was unearned. Helt batted in his own winning run with a single in the third.

The Wolverine cause was helped by freshman Leon Roberts, who smashed an inside-the-park homer in the fifth.

In the nightcap, freshman righthander Mickey Elwood also threw a four-hitter and again the only Illinois run was unearned. Elwood also had a perfect day at the plate with a double and a single in two official trips.

First base coach Elston Howard of the New York Yankees was the last catcher voted most valuable player honors in the American League. He got the award in 1963.

has worked in and for the United States government, the reserve system "tends to depress wage levels because there is no opportunity to negotiate with alternative users of the services."

Establishment of that point is considered critical to the Flood case, an antitrust suit in which the former St. Louis Cardinal outfielder is charging that baseball operates in restraint of trade through the reserve system and therefore violates federal antitrust statutes.

None of the stars of the proceedings were in court—Flood, his attorney, Arthur Goldberg, or baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn—and after Nathan's testimony, court was adjourned until Monday morning.

Before the adjournment, however, baseball counsel hinted at its possible defense in the case as Nathan came under cross examination. At that time, counsel for baseball stressed the unique costs involved in training players as opposed to other businesses and emphasized the disparity of financial resources among its 24 clubs.

In direct testimony, Nathan said the reserve system created a "total and complete imbalance between employer and employee" that benefitted the owner. He also said he knew of no parallel in our business system.

Oakland Erases 7-Run Deficit To Score 9-8 Win

CHICAGO (AP) — Felipe Alou scored the winning run on a two-base error by right-fielder John Matias as the Oakland A's erased a seven-run deficit with four-run rallies in the sixth and eighth innings Friday night and nipped the Chicago White Sox 9-8.

Alou tied the game with a two-out, two-run double in the eighth and scored from second when Matias dropped Don Mincher's fly ball.

Chicago jumped ahead with a six-run uprising in the first inning capped by Ed Herrmann's three-run homer. A two-run homer by Carlos May in the fourth boosted the White Sox' lead to 8-1.

Tito Francona's pinch single scored a run for Oakland in the second and the A's picked up four more in the sixth on pinch-hitting strength.

Dave Duncan and Tony LaRussa singled before Dick Green's pinch single scored a run and John Donaldson followed with a three-run homer.

Reliever Danny Murphy issued a walk to open the eighth and then retired the next two batters before walking Rick Monday and giving way to Wilbur Wood. Sal Bando singled home one run and Alou doubled home two more to tie it.

Cards Meggyesy Quits, Wants To Change Game

OAKLAND (AP)—"When the revolution comes, football will be obsolete," says Dave Meggyesy, explaining why he has retired after seven seasons as a linebacker with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It's not like I'm doing my flaming thing and dropping out. I want to work to change the institution that is football. It's where I can work best," said the bearded Meggyesy, 28.

He announced his retirement in an interview with the San Francisco Examiner's Phil Finch Friday.

"It's a crime what is done to the individual, from the little leagues to the pros. They're molded, warped, processed—whatever words you want to use."

Meggyesy, who played college football at Syracuse, moved into a modest Oakland home recently. He said he is writing a book entitled "Out of their League: Why I Quit Pro Football."

Meggyesy said he talked to Cardinal Coach Charley Winner by telephone Wednesday night for more than an hour but did not reveal his decision to leave football.

"It was strange, talking to him without that authority thing of coach and player," Meggyesy said.

"I think he was surprised to hear a player talk to him like

Ray Nagel Reinstated By Hawkeyes

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Ray Nagel was reinstated as Iowa football coach Friday night by the university's Board in Control of Athletics four days after it had voted to relieve him of his duties effective June 30.

"While the board has reconsidered its decision and has chosen to retain Mr. Nagel through the 1970 football season . . . he has been reprimanded for his past conduct and failure to cooperate with the university president and the board," said a statement issued by the board.

The reprimand was in connection with an investigation of irregularities in expense accounts submitted by members of the football staff, the latest development in a four-month feud between Nagel and athletic director Forest Evashevski, who resigned Monday as Nagel was fired.

"I'm very pleased with the action of the athletic board," Nagel said from his home Friday night. "We're looking forward to the coming season with enthusiasm."

Samuel Fahr, chairman of the Board in Control of Athletics, announced the reinstatement action.

"I have met today with representatives of the University of Iowa football team who have expressed their clear desire to finish the 1970 football program under Coach Ray Nagel," Fahr's statement said.

The statement said Nagel would be retained for the duration of his present five-year contract, which expires Dec. 31, on condition that funds allotted for recruiting prospective athletes be strictly accounted for in the future.

"While there is no apparent conference rules violation, in order to be certain on this point the board has, as a condition of their continued employment, required the coaches concerned to account for all funds involved," the statement said.

Nagel's firing and Evashevski's resignation culminated a feud which reportedly stemmed from Evashevski's dissatisfaction over Nagel's conduct of the Iowa football program.

HITS 1,000-POINT MARK
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The University of New Mexico's Ron Becker, a 6-foot-4 forward, recently became the fourth Lobo to score more than 1,000 career points.

Becker scored 25 points in New Mexico's final game of the 1969-70 season to give him a three-year varsity total of 1,010 points.

Becker, who hails from Roswell, N.M., set another school record by starting in 30 straight varsity games.

that.

"We hadn't spoken more than a minute together before that. It was always like, you know, grunt, how're you feeling, how's the shoulder, how's the weight, the whole coaches' mentality."

Meggyesy's statements were similar to those of another pro football linebacker who quit recently, Chip Oliver of the Oakland Raiders.

Oliver, who has joined a communal living group in nearby Larkspur, said he was tired of being regarded as one of the "slabs of beef" who hit each other in pro football.

Meggyesy said he would try to persuade other players to leave pro football.

Illinois State Eliminated From NCAA Tourney

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — Nicholls State of Louisiana came from an early 4-0 deficit to record a 6-4 triumph over Illinois State University in the NCAA Midwest College Regional Baseball Tournament Friday.

Nicholls tied the count at 4-4 in the fifth inning, with the big blow a two-run double by shortstop Mike Longmire. Two runs in the seventh sewed it up as catcher Peter Workman drove in the eventual winning run with a triple and Longmire squeezed home an insurance run with a bunt single, his third hit of the game.

Nicholls, with one loss in the double elimination tournament, will meet unbeaten Southern Illinois of Edwardsville in Saturday's title round.

The winner of the tournament goes to the college division world series in Springfield, Mo., June 3.

Guenther Named ISU Line Coach

BLOOMINGTON — Former Illinois State football star Hank Guenther has been named line coach at North Central College, Naperville.

The announcement was made this week by Dick Parker, new head football coach at North Central. Guenther will be an admissions counselor at North Central in addition to his football duties.

Guenther, a three-year all-Interstate Conference guard at ISU, was co-captain of the Redbirds as a senior in 1968. Illinois State shared conference championships during Guenther's junior and senior years.

Guenther remained active in football at ISU during the past year while working on a graduate degree. He assisted in coaching with the freshman team last fall, and worked with varsity coach Larry Bitcon in spring practice.

Horton's Double Helps Detroit Tip Senators 3-2

DETROIT (AP) — Willie Horton's two-run double in the third inning, following a costly error by Washington's Mike Epstein, helped the Detroit Tigers edge the Senators 3-2 Friday night.

Loser Jim Hannan, 0-1, walked Al Kaline with two out in the Tigers third and Jim Northrup followed with a ground smash past Epstein, the Senators first baseman, for a two-base error. Horton then followed with his blow.

Kaline knocked in the Tigers' final tally in the seventh with a sacrifice fly after Mickey Stanley walked, stole second and went to third on a bunt hit.

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP)—Jim Williams resigned today after three seasons as head basketball coach at Danville Junior College. His assistant also quit, effective immediately.

Williams, whose teams have won 47 games while losing 31, said he was quitting because the college administration is discontinuing the school's athletic scholarship program.

Williams said neither he nor his assistant, George Latovich, has any immediate plans.

Will Recommend Only 12 Players On Safe List

TORONTO (AP) — The National Hockey League Players Association will recommend that each team be allowed to protect only 12 players from Buffalo and Vancouver in the June expansion draft and that the reserve clause be dropped.

"This is part of the association's decision to voice their opinion over the running of the hockey business," said Alan Eagleson of Toronto, executive director of the player's group.

Eagleson, did not outline the players' plan of action. But he did go into a detailed analysis of why the players were concerned because "the expansion division of the NHL has become weaker and weaker," since its inception in 1967.

He said that the West Division in 1967-68 was less than 40 per cent as strong as the old East Division, lost about four or five per cent of its quality the next season and "you just have to recall that the Boston Bruins lost only one game to an expansion club this season."

"This is not equality and the players propose that each existing team be allowed to protect only 12 players from Vancouver and Buffalo in the expansion draft in June," he said.

Under current NHL rules, each existing club will be allowed to protect 15 players from the Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres, who enter the league next season.

2 Will Be Added To Hall Of Fame

Heppburn was killed on the speedway practicing May 16, 1948, after competing in 15 Memorial Day 500-mile races. He lost to Wilbur Shaw by 2.16 seconds in 1937.

Cummings won the 1934 Indianapolis classic and twice won the pole position. He was national driving champion in 1934. He died in 1939.

McCormack

Now, we in the Democratic leadership followed that policy when President Eisenhower was in. It was the right policy from the angle of the government and it was a wise policy politically.

Q. How do you feel about the seniority system?

A. I have never seen a better system, one from a practical angle that more nearly—and when I say a practical angle I mean a human angle—approximates perfection. If any better system can be devised I'd be for it, but I haven't seen one offered yet.

The question of seniority is not a rule of the Democratic party. It's a custom and a practice, and any caucus can overturn it, always. The caucus has the power now, always did have the power. Most people don't realize that. There have been one or two occasions where a caucus has not accepted a recommendation of the Committee on Committees (which handles committee assignments) and did not accept a chairman who, in accordance with the practice and custom, was recommended.

The caucus is the master. The caucus is supreme. The caucus doesn't have to accept anybody they don't want. They could change the committee assignment of anybody if they want to.

Q. Mr. Speaker, I was interested the other day in how strongly you came out for 18-year-old voting—

A. Well, I've been for that for years because for me it's an educational test. Are American citizens 18, 19 and 20 years of age collectively qualified to exercise suffrage? The answer to that in my mind is emphatically yes.

Q. We have been seeing that a number of these young people are turning from demonstrations to what you might call conventional political action. Do you think they are going to stick with it, and do you think this is a good thing?

A. Well, I think that being interested in conventional politics as we call it conventional in connection with our established form of government, is an excellent thing, not only for students, young folks who are not students, but for all people no matter what their age. I think it will continue. But I imagine that after the present emotionalism subsides, there'll be a lot of loss of interest. We're dealing with human nature.

Q. Do you think it will be a good thing for your own party, and for the other party too, to have more young people actively involved?

A. Yes, I think it's broader than that, more people of all ages actively involved, because the very type of government we have is represented by the persons who are elected to public life, and that starts at the grassroots among the voters—each individual voter going in and casting his or her vote—determines who's elected to the various offices.

Q. Do you see any signs of what you might call emotionalism subsiding?

A. It's difficult to answer that question. I would think that the great majority of students, the overwhelming majority, don't favor the small group who are radical, and among that small group are some who would like to see the overthrow of the government. I see that even since the recent meeting in Washington, a number of students have given very serious consideration to fighting for what they believe in, but separating themselves from the extremists, those who would lead them along the wrong pathway in connection with the best interests of our government. I am very happy that has happened.

New York Times May Suspend Publication

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times, beset by a printers' work slowdown, says it will discontinue publication temporarily on Sunday unless an agreement is reached with Typographical Union No. 6.

Publisher Arthur Ochs Sulzberger announced Thursday that without a settlement the newspaper would suspend publication after its Sunday editions are printed Saturday night, and that employees would not be paid beginning with the Sunday morning shift.

The announcement came as printers in the Times composing room continued to conduct on-the-job union meetings, now totaling 19 hours a day. Negotiations between the printers' union and publishers of the city's four major dailies are deadlocked.

The printers have not said publicly what kind of contract they are demanding, but Local 6 President Bertram A. Powers vowed that his men would not accept a contract that did not meet their needs.

"If it means lockout, we'll willingly take it unless we get what we need," Powers said in the composing room 20 minutes after Sulzberger's announcement.

The Times' announced intention to suspend publication was expected to prompt a resumption of negotiations between the printers and representatives of the Times, the Daily News, and the Post and the Long Island Press. Talks broke off May 9 after a 19-hour bargaining session that failed to produce an agreement.

The Times was chosen as the printers' job-action target in a move to put pressure on all four papers, whose contracts with the other nine industry craft unions as well as the printers have expired. A settlement with the printers is expected to set the contract pattern for the other unions.

It was not immediately clear whether a shutdown by the Times would lead to a shutdown by the other three papers, as has happened in the past. The News and the Post had no comment and the Press said it had reached no decision.

A Times spokesman said a shutdown would not affect the newspaper's special features and news services or the Times radio station, WQXR.

GM Faces Young At Annual Meet Of Stockholders

DETROIT (AP) — Stockholders overwhelmingly threw their support to the management of General Motors Corp. Friday after a group sought to pass two proposals which they said would make the giant automaker "more responsible to social and public needs."

However, spokesmen for the groups—called Campaign GM—said it received more support than the 2 per cent expected.

The vote showed shareholders cast 97.27 per cent of the shares to defeat a proposal that would have established a shareholders committee to evaluate GM's performance in a wide field of activities ranging from auto safety to the hiring and promotion of Negroes.

The vote was 227,052,866 shares against, 6,361,299 in favor. There were 61,794 or 7.19 per cent, individual stockholders in favor and 798,078 against. The second proposal that would have added "three representatives of the public" to the firm's 23-man board of directors was voted against by 97.56 per cent of the shares.

The vote was 227,776,067 shares against and 5,691,130 for. Individual stockholders were 53,495, in favor and 806,398 against.

James M. Roche, GM's board chairman, said after the vote, "We leave this meeting more determined to continue to fulfill our social responsibilities and more committed to efforts to obtain a fuller public understanding of all we are accomplishing."

At the start of the meeting, Roche replied to the challenge by Campaign GM that the automaker was not responsible to social and public needs.

"We have made substantial progress in fulfilling all our responsibilities," he said. "There is always more, much more than must be done, by GM and others. We believe that, in fairness, our progress should be measured against what has been accomplished, as well as against what remains to be done."

Leonard Woodcock, who only hours before was elected to take the place of the late Walter P. Reuther as head of the United Workers Auto Workers, went to the meeting and spoke in behalf of one of two proposals submitted by the minority stockholders.

It was the first time a president of the UAW ever attended an auto manufacturer's annual meeting.

Philip W. Moore, an attorney and spokesman for a Washington-based group called "The Project on Corporate Responsibility" (PCR), said before the start of the stockholders meeting that the two proposals probably would fall short of an impressive vote total.

Supporters of Campaign GM, which is an offshoot of PCR, said they were hopeful they would get at least two per cent of GM's 285 million shares in favor of their proposals.

Stockholder attendance was expected to be larger than last year's 724.

Grape Growers Agree To Pact

FRESNO, Calif. (AP)—In the first major breakthrough in a five-year California table grapes labor dispute, two large growers have agreed to two-year contracts with Cesar Chavez' union.

The two signers — Bianco, Bianco Fruit Corp. of Fresno, and the Disputo Co. of Tulare, owned by Bruno Disputo — produced 80 million of the 718 million pounds of fresh grapes.

Chavez, who organized a nationwide boycott of table grapes to gain union recognition, told a news conference the contracts were "very moderate as to terms."

But he said he was hopeful they would bring "a measure of peace to the grape industry."

The contracts call for vineyard workers to receive $1.75 an hour as a minimum wage, plus a 25-cent-per-box incentive rate. They also will get 12 cents an hour in fringe benefits.

The second year of the contract provides for a $1.90 minimum hourly wage.

Top pre-contract wage was about $1.65 an hour plus 15 cents a box.

They were the first contracts negotiated by Chavez' AFL-CIO United Farm Workers Organizing Committee in the San Joaquin Valley, where most of the nation's table grapes are grown. Six previous contracts were signed with minor growers in the Coachella Valley in Southern California.

The agreements, effective June 15, will affect about 3,000 workers and 3,070 acres of grapes in the San Joaquin and Coachella valleys in California and in Arizona, where Disputo operates vineyards at Centennial Farms near Phoenix.

The growers also agreed to a union demand not to use several pesticides which the union contends are injurious to workers' health.

Chavez said his organization plans to intensify nonunion table grape boycott activity and predicted that if the grape strike is not fully settled, "California will see the first general strike by farm workers."

Several Ways To Clean
Tarnished Copper Kettle

By POLLY CRAMER
DEAR POLLY and Anxious—I am an antique dealer and have had my fair share of copper to clean so think I have real help for the cleaning of that old copper preserving kettle. Submerge it in hot soapy water, remove, sprinkle with table salt and rub the surface with a slice of lemon until the copper shines through. Repeat treatments will be necessary if it is very tarnished. Once the surface is clean, the soft patina of the old copper will shine, so wash, rinse and then dry. I always keep a piece of lemon at hand for cleaning the copper bottoms of my cooking pans and this is far cheaper than buying commercial cleaners. If this treatment is used on brass, great care must be taken to thoroughly wash and rinse to prevent pitting. Your column certainly cuts corners in my hectic schedule.—VIRGINIA

DEAR POLLY — Anxious wanted a cheap and easy way to clean an old copper preserving kettle. She can have this by spreading tomato catsup—yes, catsup—all over the copper and let it stand for about 15 minutes. Wash in warm suds and dry. If badly stained, the kettle might require another such treatment. This works fine on copper bottom cooking pans and old wash boilers, too. The boilers make great magazine holders.—MRS. D.S.

DEAR POLLY—Do tell Anxious that to clean any copper article she can pour some vinegar in the kettle, sprinkle ordinary salt in the vinegar and rub with a cloth or sponge. It will clean up like magic. If especially stubborn, use a sponge that has a grit backing but, in average cases, this is not necessary. The proportion of salt to vinegar is not important. Just pour some vinegar and be generous with the salt. I think Anxious will be well-pleased with this and it certainly is economical. This Pointer was given me by an old-time candy maker who had to keep his copper kettles bright.—MRS. J.A.R.

DEAR GIRLS—If you ever have the misfortune to burn the bottom of a copper pan, use the catsup, then rub with steel wool. Apply more catsup and leave for 15 minutes with a paper towel over it. Then rub some more with steel wool. Repeat until the bottom is free of burns. It will be shiny and bright.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—I have several strings of pearls I would like to restring but am not sure how to make knots next to each pearl so each will be smooth and tight. Could any reader help me? If I qualify as a "problem," I would rather have your book than the Polly Dollar.—MRS. C.P.

For every expert there are ten self-appointed experts. This second group think they are experts. They know a lot of things experts do but they get them just a trifle wrong and wind up losing contracts that a real expert or an average player would have no trouble with.

South's bidding is typical of this group of masterminds. Once his partner jumped in hearts, he was off to a grand slam by way of Blackwood. Still, the contract was a good one.

Mr. John Average Player would count 12 top tricks only and would draw trumps and eventually finesse successfully for the queen of clubs to score his 13th trick.

An expert would see a chance for a dummy reversal play. He would cash dummy's ace of trumps at trick two to make sure that all five trumps wouldn't show up in one hand. After both opponents followed, he would ruff a spade and lead a second trump to dummy's queen. Assuming both opponents followed, he would ruff another spade, enter dummy with the king of diamonds, ruff the last spade with his own last trump, enter dummy with the ace of clubs, pull the last enemy trump with dummy's seven while discarding his last low club and make the rest of the tricks with the king of clubs and three good diamonds.

However, when East showed out on the second trump, South would abandon this play, draw trumps and finally fall back on the club finesse.

Our hero knew about dummy reversals but he did not know about 4-1 trump breaks. He ruffed a spade at trick two, entered dummy with a diamond to ruff another spade and eventually had to let West make a little trump.

Marriage In Black And White

By AN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

Once they've weathered the initial shock and swallowed their hangups, the question most parents ask when their daughter announces she's going to marry a black man is: "But what about the children?"

It's a hesitant question, of course, steeped in skepticism, veiled in fear. It reflects both the anguished self-appraisal of "Where did we go wrong?" and the concern, "What will the neighbors think?"

The world is complicated enough, the elders argue. Marriage has enough hurdles. Why risk one more?

"Because our similarities outweighed our differences," Dr. Robert Murray, black geneticist, Washington.

"Because we knew we were in love and that the biggest problems would be ones other people made for us," Kenneth Jackson, black patrolman, Detroit.

"Because, ideally, isn't this the way the world should be?" —Jacqueline Parrish, a white housewife, Boston.

Fifteen couples in four cities —New York, Washington, Detroit and Boston—indicated in recent Associated Press interviews that, in most of the country, they find little acceptance of interracial marriage, especially among what they call "the white middle class."

Almost all of them have experienced the anger and frustration of being refused at restaurants the bitter helplessness of not having a personal check accepted or, perhaps most disheartening, the moments when the white woman next door won't let her children play with those who are "part colored."

Some of the couples interviewed purposely don't tell their employers or business associates about their family arrangements for fear of not being promoted, being fired, or, as one woman said, "just because there are some things you don't tell, to make life easier."

One black man who is about to become a father for the first time said he wants only sons "because they're easier to arm."

Some of the white wives, who are married to young black militant types, said they fear for their husbands' lives in any racial confrontation. Some concede they fear for their own as well.

But not, they said, for the lives of their children. They seem to feel the young will lead this country down the road of racial understanding towards racial peace. They said interracial married parents are still paying the dues, but one day their children will roam free.

Bob and Peachy Murray of Washington have been married 13 years and have three attractive children of their own. Colin, 12, is in junior high and plays the piano. Bobby, 10, plays the flute, swims almost every night and hopes to be in the Junior Olympics. Suzanne, 8, is in the third grade and plays the clarinet.

Last year, the Murrays adopted a baby daughter whom they've been told is "mixed breed"—a harsh term to describe the little girl who is almost as light skinned as her Caucasian mother and whose brothers and sister brag, "she's integrated, just like us."

"I really don't think the kids will have many problems they can't handle," said Dr. Murray, an assistant professor at Washington's Howard University who grew up in Newburgh, N.Y.

"They choose with which race they want to identify," Dr. Murray said. "One week the boys will have a white girl friend, the next week a black one."

Peachy Murray, one of 10 children whose father is a Methodist minister in Houghton, N.Y., says her parents didn't approve of the marriage and refused to attend the wedding.

"They've mellowed some and they adore the children," Mrs. Murray said as she brushed her long dark hair off her face. "But they can't understand how this is God's will. The children know this, but they can't understand why, if my parents love them, they couldn't accept Daddy."

The Murrays live in an integrated neighborhood in the northwest section of the capital and said, yes, both their black and white friends accept their marriage.

"Of course we circulate in an academic community," Dr. Murray said. "Even if they disapprove of us, they think they're too sophisticated to say so."

The Murrays say they don't condone interracial marriage for everyone, certainly, and agree that couples who marry to defy society or their parents

A LITTLE SHY, perhaps, a small boy is questioned by South Vietnamese rangers as his brother sits bound in background. The two were in a group of suspected Viet Cong guerrillas captured when ARVN and American forces penetrated Cambodian territory.

Metallic Thread Livens Embroidery

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Shimmer and shine may next appear under embroidery hoops, keeping up with the trend to glitter now prevalent in dress and home furnishings fashions. Metallic threads may be the ultimate challenge to embroiderers, says Mary Ann Beinecke, director of the Nantucket School of Needlework. She has dedicated herself to unveiling all facets of embroidery to put embroiderers at ease with their hoops and to set universal standards of embroidery terminology.

Toward this end profits from the school and the school's home study courses, both of which are sponsored by the Nantucket Historical Trust, go into research and development. "A great mystique has surrounded metallic threads," Mrs. Beinecke explained. "Metallics are real metals that were used decoratively by Egyptians and other peoples in ancient times, but most modern embroiderers overlook their use."

The silver and gold threads seen in many modern fabrics, curtains, draperies and upholstery are not the same kind of threads, she says. Egyptian embroiderers used almost pure gold, stringing it into wire. They beat it to thinness and then twisted it around silk. In the 16th century, lots of metallics were used in ecclesiastical decoration and since then it has been identified more or less only with churches.

Mrs. Beinecke took the first step in interesting students in metallics work when she commissioned international embroidery authority and teacher Emily Rivett of England to show metallics and stumwork to the school's teachers.

Miss Rivett brought with her from a convent a 300-year-old ecclesiastical hood that was worked in stumwork—an exquisite embroidery technique involving delicate silk threads, metals and puff-like applique. People will not want to do such elaborate work, but the ideas may be adapted to modern embroidery techniques for canvas work, curtains and pillows. Miss Rivett taught the stitches, color and design principles to groups. They used metallic threads—metal flattened and twisted around a core of silk—in three basic sizes. Three threads twisted form a "cordine," two "cordines" make a small cord. Mohair, worsted and metallics may be combined for an unusual look.

Mrs. Beinecke plans to include metallic embroidery techniques in the school's home-study course which is widely circulated in the United States and Europe. But she says the metallics must be incorporated into the curriculum very carefully "because they are difficult to use and difficult to unwind and must be kept in a tight, airtight place."

"Needlework is becoming one of the finest art forms," sums up Mrs. Beinecke. "When I teach color, I get very excited because I think great artwork can be done with the various textures that needlework can supply."

The idea of achieving dimension effects by using different shades of a color is one of the most popular ideas in modern embroidery.

QUARRY CLOSES

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Rubislaw quarry near Aberdeen in Scotland, the deepest quarry in the world, is to close after nearly 200 years of exploitation in which more than 6,000,000 tons of gray granite were extracted.

The quarry now is 480 feet deep and its floor is 180 feet under the North Sea level. It is 900 feet long and 700 feet wide. Granite from this mine helped build many famous buildings all over the world. It is estimated that half the buildings in Aberdeen were made of its granite giving the city its second name, "granite city."

The owners decided to close the quarry after finding that no worthwhile rock was extracted in the last two years, making it uneconomical to run.

ABORTION REFORM

CHICAGO (AP) — Laws controlling the termination of pregnancies by abortion are the target for repeal by many groups and an Illinois group says it is the first to advocate a confidential woman-physician relationship.

Ralph Brown, president of The Illinois Citizens for the Medical Control of Abortion, said the organization is the first of its kind in the United States to adopt as its platform the making of termination of pregnancies as a private decision between the woman and her physician.

LETTER FROM HEW — Pamela Cross, nine, holds up a letter from the Department of HEW, a reply to a letter she wrote to President Nixon complaining she could "smell the sewage" when she went on a hike and suggesting he do something about it. "Pay attention to your own learning activities, and let the President take care of decisions on National and international affairs," the HEW letter said. Pamela doesn't understand why she is supposed to be interested in public affairs and then is told to mind her own business. UPI Telephoto

Local Red Cross Asks Letters Sent To Hanoi To Help War Captives

The Morgan County Chapter of the American Red Cross is encouraging all local citizens to express their concern and mobilize world public opinion to urge North Vietnam to honor the spirit of the Geneva Conventions and end the abuse of war prisoners.

Everyone can assist in this project; drop by the local Red Cross office, 1440 West Walnut ave., Medical Building No. 2, to write an airmail letter or mail one on your own.

In your letter ask North Vietnam to obey the Geneva Conventions and to release the names of the prisoners and to allow inspection of their prisoner-of-war camps.

Address your air-mail letter to Office of the President, Democratic Republic of Vietnam, Hanoi, North Vietnam. It only costs 25 cents to mail.

Regardless of your personal attitude concerning the war, we ask that you think of the families and the men themselves.

Local delegates attending the National Red Cross meeting in Chicago this week met with three of the wives of missing men, presumed captured by the Vietnamese and being held prisoners along with 1,500 other young men.

The wives present at the meeting were Mrs. Patrick Wood, Tucson, Arizona; Mrs. Bobby Vinson, Alexandria, Virginia; and Mrs. David Winn, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Red Cross is a neutral agency concerned with man's humanity to man; these men and their families ask for your help.

Broken Levee Occurs Along Illinois River

A broken levee located midway between Meredosia and Naples flooded a number of country roads along the Illinois River Friday. Scott County sheriff's deputies said Friday evening.

Friday evening's rains, which lasted half an hour in that area, somewhat worsened the condition, officers said, but residents of some 30 homes in the area were reportedly out of danger. According to Scott sheriff's deputies, none of the main highways skirting the flooded area have been inundated.

Time of the break remained uncertain, but one Scott County deputy, investigating a report of the break Friday afternoon, said he was forced to turn back because of flooded roads. The extent of the damage to the levee and the cause of the break were undetermined also.

Some sources reported that the water is higher than it has been since 1963. Much of the land north of Meredosia is flooded. The Scott County sheriff's office, however, said deputies did not receive any calls for assistance. Country roads leading from the flooded area and onto main traffic arteries remained passable.

City police charged Petefish following a high-speed chase from the public square to the corner of Lincoln and Morton.

The 16th Annual Safety Lane remains more than 1,000 vehicles short of its goal for 6,000 inspected autos this year.

Moving into the last official day of the 10-point safety check program today, co-chairmen are hoping for fair weather to attract the 25 per cent shortage for the goal. With Friday's turnout of 898 vehicles, officials say they have inspected 4,674 cars.

During Friday's operation, 151 autos were rejected or faulty equipment but 136 returned with repairs and received circles of safety. Most of the rejections were caused by defective headlights and parking lights.

A number of business places had employees traveling through the lane in groups Friday, including: Walton's, Roach Plumbing and Heating, Rid-All Pest Control, Friendly Cab Company, Star Brothers Distributors and J. C. Capps and Sons.

Assisting Friday were mechanics from Allied Motors, members of the Ambucs and Exchange clubs, students from Jacksonville High school and officers of state, county and city law enforcement agencies.

The lane, co-sponsored by the city police department, JHS' Group for Auto Safety and the local association of insurance agents, is located on West Morgan Street between Church and Kosciusko streets. Hours for the final day today are 9 this morning to 6 p.m.

There is no cost for the inspection and additional services are being provided by a mobile office of the secretary of state's office.
